The Biggest Bank
We Are Sugar Eaters
Midsummer Boom
How Does France Do It?

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1929, King Features Synd., Inc.

GROWTH in America is rapid. The Brazilian jungle along the Amazon is not more luxuriant, in its way, than the financial jungle along Wall Street.

Some time ago the National City Bank, then biggest in America, was passed in assets by a combination of other banks.

Now the National City, again passing all American rivals, becomes biggest bank in the world, except two, the Midland and Lloyd's, both British. C. E. Mitchell will probably set sail to overtake those world leaders.

In 1870 the total resources of the National City Bank were $6,986,000. Now they are two thousand and sixty million.

In the last six months, Americans have eaten more than six and a half billion pounds of sugar. Prohibition helps that. More candy is sold.

The country this year will use 13 billion pounds of sugar. If the tariff increases cost but two cents a pound, that will cost the public $260,000,000.

This country is enjoying a surprising mid-summer industrial boom rarely equalled.

Instead of the usual mid-summer slump, manufacturing has had a great boom.

And all this in spite of the Federal Reserve, that was supposed to stabilize credit, and that has been using its feeble brain and great government influence to hamper and damage national business.

Paris reports money easy "despite heavy half yearly payments. The money rate remained officially at 3 per cent, with the outside rate of 3½."

Why not send some of the Federal Reserve school boy bankers, to learn how France does it?

And, while they are away, why not discreetly inquire to what extent those gentlemen own bank stocks that have been fattened by the criminally usurious rates, up to 20 per cent, established here with the aid of the Federal Reserve?

The earth's surface is well explored. Nobody has stood on top of Mt. Everest, parts of the world have not been visited by white men, but its surface is sufficiently well known.

Next will come exploration of the earth's interior, its inexhaustible heat, power and mineral supplies, exploration of the ocean's bed of which a great deal was once in the sunlight, and far up exploration of our atmosphere and the photosphere beyond the breathing point

The Smithsonian Institution has discovered two bands of super-oxygen, a ring of ozone 18 to 31 miles above our heads, going around the earth.

Ozone, highly stimulating, beneficial form of oxygen, is formed by electrical discharges in thunder storms.

Doctors in days to come may send their patients up to the ozone belt.

A young German, whose ideas are endorsed by the brilliant Einstein and other scientists, has invented an airship that could take men up there. It is planned to cross the Atlantic in about six hours, travelling 40,000 feet up, to escape resistance by the heavy lower atmosphere.

On Sunday, Lindbergh, having just flown across the continent with his wife, pressing a button, in Los Angeles, turned on a light in New York, and the first Pennsylvania Rail and Air trip started across the continent. Pullman car by night, airplane by day, ocean to ocean in 48 hours.

ONLY 2 GET OUT ALIVE IN WRECK

H-47 Is Sunk by L-12 in St. George's Channel; No Hope of Rescue

London, July 9 (AP)—The First Lord of the Admiralty announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that no hope could be entertained of the remainder of the crew of the submarine H-47 being rescued alive.

London, July 9 (AP)—The British submarine H-47 was sunk in St. George's channel by another underseas boat, the L-12.

The admiralty, in announcing the disaster, said there were two survivors from the H-47, and only one one man lost aboard the L-12. Since the complement of the H-47 was 23 men it was presumed 21 had perished or were in the boat on the bottom of the channel, exclusive of the one dead on the L-12.

Details were not immediately available. The two submarines were in collision, the admiralty statement locating the disaster as "off Pembroke coast, to west of Fishguard, in position 52 degrees 04 minutes north, and 5 degrees 32 minutes west." This is about 15 miles northwest of Saint David's Head, the nearest land.

COMMANDER SAVED.

The admiralty announced that one of the survivors of the H-47 was Lieut. R. J. Gardner, her commanding officer. The other man saved was Sidney Cleburne of Devonport, telegraph operator. The man missing from the L-12 was Charles Edward Bull, chief signal man.

One man of the L-12 was serious-

HUNT 2 AS SLAYERS OF BOY

U. S. Agents, Boston, Lynn, Saugus and State Police Seeking North End Men

The slaying of Salvatore Damore, 10, of Stillman st., has revealed existence of a huge extortion ring in the North End, police declared today as they began search for two men as the slayers.

Young Damore, they believe now, was murdered because he complained that he would "tell a cop" the name of his kidnapers.

According to police, the extortion ring assesses some of its victims as low as $15 and other victims have paid as high as $10,000.

While police know indirectly of the extortion, they said, the victims rarely report the mulctings to the authorities, as death is threatened if such report is made.

In this connection, police declare that they are handicapped in their hunt for the murderers because Santo Damore, the father, fears further retaliation against others of remaining four children, if he gives the authorities information.

Police declared, however, that they are certain two men were im-

Chamberlain, Ill, Goes Back to Bed

London, July 9 (AP)—Severe cold and high temperature have sent Sir Austen Chamberlain, former British Conservative Foreign Minister, back to the sick bed which he was able to leave only a few months ago.

The Daily Express said today his condition was not alarming, but in view of his recent illness complete rest and quiet were thought advisable as a precaution.

Pope Welcomes Crowd of U. S. Naval Men

Vatican City, July 9 (AP)—Pope Pius XI "always receives sailors with pleasure because the successor of St. Peter himself can be regarded as a fisherman."

So the Holy Father told a large representation from the American Naval squadron anchored in the Bay of Naples who went to see him.

The Pontiff continued: "In America we have the reputation of being a great lover of mountains. That is true, but we are also great lovers of the sea."

He recommended to the sailors an Italian book by Fr. Antonio Stoppani, entitled "The Purity of the Sea and Atmosphere." He greeted the sailors with real pleasure because they were the hope of their country, he said.

The party included 40 officers, a large number of midshipmen, and 700 enlisted men and marines, introduced by Chaplain Maguire. Monsignor Burke of Morristown, N. J., rector of the American College, accompanied them.

Pilot Roger Q. Williams and his navigator, Lewis A. BATTLE ON OVER RAYON DUTY

Washington, July 9—As a Senate tariff sub-committee was today considering the conflicting arguments for and against the proposed additional duty on twisted rayon yarns, New Bedford, Mass., textile engineers were preparing to offset the attacks of the rayon yarn importers by recommendation of higher rates on the imported rayon on the grounds that the development of the industry in New England demands protection.

E. M. Leland, New Bedford, Mass., banker, sought a rate of 20 cents a pound instead of the proposed 20 per cent on rayon cut fiber, declaring a New Bedford rayon plant was prepared to enlarge its plant if the higher duty could be obtained.

The 20 per cent duty equaled only four cents a pound, he said, so the change to 20 cents would amount to a 500 per cent increase in duty. He justified this on the ground that it was a new industry and that a higher duty would open up employment to about 1000 persons in New Bedford by permit-

Williams' Own Story of Flight

EXCLUSIVE

By ROGER Q. WILLIAMS,

Written especially for the Hearst newspapers and King Features Syndicate, Inc. Copyright, 1929, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Old Orchard, Me., July 9—Ever since I began flying back in 1910, I have been trying to look ahead a number of years and determine the needs and potential stabilizing influences of aeronautics.

After spending nineteen years in aviation, I am convinced that the phase of the industry which holds the greatest promise is the establishment of a daily transatlantic mail and express service. Believing that the time has arrived for the inauguration of such commercial service, I am making this flight to Rome in an effort to gain some of the date which will be indispensable for mapping out the course over which I believe that such a connecting line can be established.

Although I am not going to pilot the Pathfinder over the route I have tentatively selected, I expect to encounter somewhat the same flying conditions as will prevail

Twohig Improving, but Still in Danger

More encouraging was the report today on the condition of Representative James J. Twohig of South Boston, who is in a critical condition at City Hospital with pneumonia.

He had a turn for the worse during the oppressive heat and his doctors held little hope for his recovery, but today it is said he was resting more comfortably, although his condition is still "very bad." Representative Twohig contracted a cold while in swimming a week ago.

EVEN MONEY ON TITLE MATCH

By JACK CONWAY

Gus Sonnenberg will defend his title as world's heavyweight wrestling champion against Strangler Lewis in a finish bout, best two falls at Fenway Park tonight under the direction of Paul Bowser.

There is tremendous interest in the meeting between Sonny and the Strangler and it is expected that the largest crowd to ever see a mat contest in New England will be on hand when the big fellows breeze into action.

Betting on the tussle is at even money. For a time Lewis ruled a choice but the price went to even money today.

Frank Herrick, an official of the Rhode Island Athletic Commission, will referee. He is a capable, fearless individual and neither Lewis nor Sonnenberg can expect to receive any the best of his rulings. The best man is sure to win with Herrick on the job.

Uchida Resignation Accepted at Tokio

Tokyo, July 9 (AP)—The Emperor today accepted the resignation of Count Uchida from the privy council. The count signed the Kellogg anti-war pact for Japan at the Paris ceremony and had been criticised for the wording of the pact. "The report is widely circulated in Ireland," said Tully, "and, although the Irish don't think much of it, they are a sentimental lot and may be led to believe that it might be good-will stuff—like the Lindbergh flight."

Ruth Repplier Sues Rich Husband

Riverside, Cal., July 9 (AP)—Ruth Repplier, dancer, has filed suit for divorce from her wealthy husband, John George Repplier, on charges of cruelty.

Mrs. Repplier charges that her husband tried to eject her from their home near Banning, Cal., last October, and that he threatened to cut off her credit. She asks $300 a month alimony, attorney's fees and a deed to the estate near Banning.

Unseen on Long Trip

PATHFINDER MISSING SINCE HOP FOR ROME 29 HOURS AGO

Lost somewhere at sea or roaring along into the dusk approaching the Spanish coast north of the Azores, the transatlantic monoplane Pathfinder, Rome-bound on a 4,700-mile non-stop flight, was unreported at 1:45 p. m. today, 29 hours after her departure from Old Orchard.

If still in the air the plane carrying Roger Q. Williams and apt. Lewis A. Yancey should have covered nearly 3,000 miles of their water jump before 4 p. m., Boston daylight saving time, with clear weather reported all across their course and a following wind that would increase their 100-mile-an-hour cruising speed by 10 or 15 miles.

There was a strong possibility that even with the increased speed the Pathfinder would not be over Cape Ortegal, Spain, until after darkness, in which case, if flying high, she might not be reported until daybreak tomorrow.

Although 29 transatlantic liners were steaming along the 41s parallel between Cape Sable, N. S., and Cape Ortegal, not one of them reported having seen the big green and silver Bellanca or having heard the roar of her single motor.

PROBABLY FLYING HIGH

This fact, while disconcerting, gave rise to little apprehension. Before departure, Williams and Yancey announced they would seek all the altitude they could get and would not descend to show themselves to any ship sihgted.

Fog reported 1600 miles eastward along their route would have increased the necessity of nigh-flying and likewise would have served to smother the sound of the Pathfinder's engine.

So while this country awaited definite word that the plane was

KING GEORGE UP EARLY TODAY

London, July 9 (AP)—King George, suffering from a relapse in the condition of the old left lung incision, was said authoritatively at Buckingham Palace today to have passed a comfortable night.

His Majesty was up at his usual hour this morning and it was said at the palace he carried out his usual routine.

Sir Stanley Hewett, one of his physicians, paid him a brief visit and left shortly with Dr. Henry Martyn, who had spent the night at the palace.

It was understood the doctors would view the X-ray photographs taken yesterday this afternoon, although it was unlikely a bulletin would be issued today.

First Woman to Fly to South America

Rio Janeiro, July 9 (AP)—Mrs. Ralph O'Neill is the first woman to fly from North to South America. She came with her husband from Tampa in a pathfinding trip for a commercial service that expects to have planes carrying 20 passengers each between Buenos Aires and New York. The time of a trip will be six days.

still in the air. Spain and France, over which she was scheduled to fly, and Italy, which was to receive her, made all arrangements for her welcome.

SHIPS ARE WATCHING

Spanish ships at sea north of the Azores had been instructed to be on the lookout for the plane and all coastal stations along Cape Ortegal had been similarly cautioned, the Spanish government believing it possible the Pathfinder, like the Yellow Bird, might find her fuel supply greatly diminished once the ocean lay behind her.

French authorities gave instructions for a sharp watch to be kept at all points along the west coast. Admirals at Cherbourg and Brest were advised to inform shipping of the flight and report promptly if the plane was seen.

All Government air fields in France were ordered to have everything in readiness in the event the Pathfinder should be forced to descend while crossing France to Italy. Throughout France there was a definite feeling that the flight would be successful.

ROME IS EXCITED.

In Rome, which has prepared so often to receive transatlantic planes and never yet witnessed the arrival of one, increasing interest in the flight brought it to fever height.

Premier Mussolini gave orders he was to be informed immediately of any developments and announced he would send his under-secretary, Balbo, to the field to welcome the fliers.

There was much speculation in which would see Williams and Yancey descend to earth there.

The fliers themselves estimated that between 45 and 50 hours of flying should place them at their destination, which would mean they should reach Rome tomorrow between 6 and 11, Boston daylight saving time.

It was considered possible, but not probable, that the Pathfinder would reach the Spanish coast in daylight, which means there is a likelihood she would make far up the French coast and inland over Europe before being seen.

With a cruising speed of approximately 100 miles per hour, the Pathfinder has had the benefit of following winds and may be averaging much higher. While the plane was expected to encounter some cloudiness and occasional showers at mid-Atlantic there was no storm of marked severity in her path.

There was small likelihood, in the opinion of Meteorologist Kimbell, unofficial starter of transatlantic flights, that the Pathfinder had changed her course and was traversing the great northern circle.

NO SAFETY APPARATUS.

If, by chance, she had been forced northward, then she has probably encountered difficulties, for there is a wide storm area along the Newfoundland latitudes.

Upon the 220 horsepower Wright motor, Williams and Yancey pinned practically every chance of life as well as of success of their venture, for without pontoons, radio or other safety paraphernalia, the Pathfinder would float, if at all, but a short time upon the ocean surface and the fliers had then only two small cushions.

Of course, there was always a chance that if, forced down, she would be lucky enough to alight near a ship as did the American Girl with Ruth Elder and George Haldemann aboard.

SHIPS IN HER PATH

President Harding, Paris, Carmania, Kungsholm, Estonia, Homeric, Cameronia, Ile de France, Albertic, Augustusan, American Merchant, Frederick VIII, Stavangerfans, Deutschland, Minnewaska, Majestic, President Hayes, Republic, DeGrasse, Muenchen, Veendam, Milwaukee, LeBourdonnais, George Washington, United States, Ca ronia, Gripsholm, Karlsruh and Berengaria.

It is in the midst of the tourist season and supposedly the Maine-to-Rome flight will be a matter of great radio interest to the passengers aboard ships. Hence many will doubtless scan the skies for even a fleeting glimpse of the soaring bird high in the heavens.

Williams' Wife Playing Bridge While Waiting

New York, July 9 (AP)—With the calmness acquired in 10 years as the wife of an aviator, Mrs. Roger Q. Williams plans to pass the time playing bridge while her husband flies to Rome.

"You see, I'm perfectly confident in him," she explained. "We have talked about this for three years and I was thoroughly prepared. Wives of aviators must feel confident. Unless you are unhappy with your husband, you'll always want him to do that which will make him happy."

Mrs. Williams disclosed her ambition to learn to fly. She said she would but for her mother's objection.

Asked if she would go to Rome, she answered: "I doubt it. I have seen too much of these plaudits for aviators' wives."

Kingsford Smith Plans to Fly From England to U. S.

Rome, July 9 (AP—Capt. Charles Kingsford Smith, noted Australian trans-Pacific flier, told the Associated Press today he had virtually decided to fly from England to the United States in the Southern Cross, after his three motors are overhauled.

When he arrived here today en route to London from Sydney, N. S. W., he was met by C. C. Kaidment of the Wright Whirlwind Motor Co., who was asked to accompany the plane to London and supervise the overhauling.

over the sections of the ocean which are to be included in the proposed mail route. I am taking the Pathfinder over a different trip solely because it is a land plane and not a sea boat.

Within five years, I believe, a transatlantic daily air mail service will be established which will connect New York City and the Continental capitals, giving 48-hour service. My plan is to make the first day's air hop from New York City to Bermuda, then through the night to the Azores, and the second day's flight from there to the Spanish coast.

That will permit mail to come from, say, London to New York City in a little over 38 hours. There will be tremendous profits from such service, and it is likely that one or more of the European nations will be willing to subsidize such an undertaking.

USE SEA BOATS

For, perhaps, the first two years of its operations, the line will carry no passengers, just mail and fast express. Then, after the mechanical difficulties of such an air service have been ironed out, it will be possible to carry passengers as well.

The course I have outlined can be operated with almost 100 per cent margin of safety by utilizing radio beacons, which would virtually permit the ships to fly themselves once they were started.

Very heavy sea boats will have to be used in this service, and I estimate the initial cost of the undertaking to be something like $2,000,000. I have already secured tentative financial backing for this project.

I have selected this particular route, not only on account of the comparatively short space of the hops but also because I believe it to be best suited for this purpose on account of weather conditions the year around. Experience has already taught us that the great circle steamship route is not the best section for flying and the recent experience of the Swedish fliers has demonstrated that the proposed Iceland-Greenland route will be far from satisfactory and represent very hazardous traveling.

BUILD FOR SAFETY

So we must go farther south for the year-around route. I have checked the weather reports for this strip of ocean for five years back, day by day, and am convinced that it will give us the best flying zone to be found anywhere. The waters thereabouts are quite generally liberally spotted with steamers going in both directions and that will represent a big safety factor.

The sea boats to be used in this endeavor must be heavier and more sturdy than any now being constructed, and will have to be equipped with huge radio broadcasting and receiving sets. In event fo a forced landing, the planes must be ready to run up a good-sized aerial and call in help.

The wisdom of selecting seaplanes for this task will be readily recognized when one considers the case of the Spanish fliers, who were rescued from the sea recently after they had been given up for lost. They had an especially fine sea boat which was able to ride the waters for almost a week, until a rescuing party found them.

Capt. Yancey and I expected to make our return trip from Europe in a sea boat which I have just located in Europe and which will be available for this purpose. We will return via the Azores-Bermuda route, and upon my arrived in America, I expect to be in position of data about that stretch of the sea which will prove of great value.

ting yarn plants now closed to enter into the new line of production.

F. I. Leary, a textile engineer, representing the New Bedford Rayon Corporation, supported the increase recommended by Mr. Leland. He also urged retention in the bill of the 45 cents a pound minimum rate on rayon yarns and manufactured goods, declaring the opportunities were good for development of the industry in New England.

Rayon was pictured as likely to supplant raw silk as a basic commodity for clothing. In behalf of the Silk Association of America to urge additional duty on twisted rayon yarns, Dean Hill of New York said that highly twisted yarn had been developed and was now taking the place of silk.

The rayon spinning industry, he said, already employed 50,000 persons, had a payroll of $50,000,000 in the United States and was expanding rapidly. Although the greatest competition was coming from European countries, he said, Japan was a serious potential competitor.

He asked additional duties of 20 and 50 per cent on twisted yarns and 20 per cent on dyed yarns.

Foreign Nations Protest Tariff; Hit Rayon Rates

Washington, July 9 (INS)—Protests by 23 foreign nations against the Hawley tariff bill today promised to assume large proportions in the Senate's revision of the measure as sub-committees prepared to close their direct testimony upon the widespread demands of manufacturers for higher rates.

With American foreign trade expanding and Europe still fighting to recover her pre-war place in the business sun, the demands of industry, backed in many instances by farm organizations, for "embargo tariffs" have aroused a high pitch of resentment in many foreign nations.

The latest note, delivered by the Italian ambassador, attacks the House increase in the tariff on rayon. The Senate rayon sub-committee is hearing rayon manufacturers appeal for an increase even in the House rates in many instances, because of the alleged threat of foreign competition.

The Italian note declared rayon imports had decreased from 19,000,000 to 16,000,000 pounds from 1927 to 1928, indicating the dominance of American rayon manufacturers. The latter, however, assert foreign importations are increasing more than a million pounds a month.

STAGE LOVERS NOW WED IN REAL LIFE

New Milford, Ct., July 9 (AP)—Friends learned today of the sudden marriage of Mary Ellis and Basil Sydney, stars in "Meet the Prince."

The couple decided to be married while guests at a week-end house party at the summer home of Richard Boleslavsky, director of the American Laboratory Theater of New York.

After the ceremony, which was performed Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney were given an impromptu wedding party, then left for New York.

Among those at the wedding were Miss Ellis' sister, former wife of Horace Liveright, the publisher; H. Cooper Smith and his wife, Alice Belmore, New York actors, and Marie Ospenska, Russian actress.

Miss Ellis had been married twice before, and Mr. Sydney once. His first wife was Doris Keane, with whom he starred in several plays, particularly "Romance" and "The Czarina." They were married in 1919 and divorced in 1925.

Miss Ellis was married in 1920 to Lieut Louis G. Bernheimer, a World War aviator, from whom she was divorced three years later. That same year she married Edwin H. Knopf, a brother of Alfred A. Knopf, the publisher. They were divorced in 1925.

Since 1925 Miss Ellis and Mr. Sydney have appeared in the same productions and always as sweethearts. Miss Ellis earlier scored a great success in "Rose Marie."

Mr. Sydney is an Englishman and made his first appearance in this country in 1914. He was one of the first to play Shakespeare in modern dress.

ly injured in the collision. He was Arthur Sampson, seaman. His condition was critical.

The depth of water at the scene of the sinking was 45 fathoms or 270 feet, a depth which would make diving operations extremely difficult.

The worst post-war British submarine disaster recorded took place in 1925 when the H-1 was sunk off Star Point with the loss of 68 lives.

OTHER DISASTERS

Other disasters included the disappearance of the K-5 in 1921 off the Scilly Isles while at diving practice, with the loss of 57 lives. In 1922 the H-42 was rammed by a destroyer off Europa Point near Gibraltar and 26 men were killed. In 1924 the L-WR was sunk during maneuvers off Portland and 43 were killed.

The submarine L-12 belonged to the second "L" series which were begun by the emergency war program of 1916.

It was of the admiralty saddle tank type and had extensive equipment, such as that for launching balloons.

The latest navy list showed the following chief officers of the H-47: Lieutenant in Command R. J. Gardner, Lieut. R. W. Moh Sub-Lieut. of the Royal Naval Reserve K. G. Cronin.

The submarine H-47 also was built under the war emergency program. It was smaller than the L-12, with a displacement of 440 tons and a length of 164½ feet. It carried four torpedo tubes.

The sister ship, the H-29, sank in dock at Davenport in August, 1926, and consequently was placed on the disposal list.

RUSH SALVAGE SHIPS.

The L-12 has six torpedo tubes in addition to extensive other armament, refrigerating machinery for storage batteries, directional hydroplanes and three periscopes. Its length is 229 feet and its displacement 890 tons.

It was the second of the "L' series. Three sister ships have been lost, the L-24, rammed off Portland, 1924; the L-10, a war loss, and the L9, which foundered off Hongkong in 1923. This last finally was salvaged.

The dockyard tugs Resolve and Grapples at Portsmouth were hurriedly coaled and provisioned for sea with salvage gear today, on receipt of word of the sinking of the H-47.

The naval ball planned tonight at the town hall of Torquay has been cancelled by the commander of the Atlantic fleet, who acted when news of the submarine disaster reached him. He sent Capt. Fleet ashore to confer with the mayor in regard to the matter.

Mortgage Homes to Save Church

Tampa, Fla., July 9—Property of the First Christian Church here, valued at $235,000 will remain in possession of the congregation for the present at least despite the apparently insurmountable odds in financing its retention.

One member of the congregation sold his automobile, another borrowed on his life insurance, a third put up a mortgage on his home, and others borrowed various sums to meet a $10,000 note due on the new building.

Aero 'Thumber'

Mrs. Lucien Zacharoff of Brooklyn, N. Y., who, with her husband, is off on an attempted "hitch hike" by airplane to California. The couple have made the first lap of the journey to Schenectady, N. Y. They hope to be the first aero hitch hikers.

3 PEACE MOVES IN CAR STRIKE

New Orleans, July 9 (AP)—After paralyzing the transportation system here for a week, the city-wide street car strike entered its crucial stage today, as federal conciliators and the city commission council earnestly sought common ground upon which New Orleans Public Service, Inc., and the carmen's union might negotiate for settlement, draft a working contract and resume service.

It was freely admitted that continuance of the calm restored after a storm in which two lives were sacrificed and street cars were burned, depended upon the success or failure of events set for today.

Mediation by two conciliators of the Department of Labor, hearing of an injunction suit filed by bond holders of the company to prevent destruction of property and the company's reply to the city council's urgent request to arbitrate on the union's stand were the routes through which effort was being made to end the strike.

Wooden Shoe Nails Make Electricity

Budapest, July 9 (AP)—Some wooden shoe nails from Russia are helping to make electricity at a big power station. They are sharp on four sides, as is the wont in Russia. Those used in Hungary are sharp on two sides. The consignees refused to accept the Russian goods. They were sold at auction to pay storage charges, 900 cases of them. The only demand for them was as fuel.

WOMEN BATTLE FOR INCOME TAX CUT

Declare It Unfair to Make Earned Money Pay as Much as Invested

Mackinac Island, Mich., July 9 (INS)—Miss Martha Connole of East St. Louis, Ill., legislative chairman of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, meeting here in its tenth annual convention, announced today that she will recommend that the convention back a campaign for a reduction in federal income tax on earned incomes.

"It is unfair to tax the earned incomes on the same basis as that derived from interest on investments or inherited income," she said.

"We have 55,000 leading business and professional women in our organization," Miss Connole said. "We are becoming a power. Ruth Hanna McCormick and Ruth Bryan Owen, Congresswomen, are members of our organization and we have their assurance that they will work for legislation which we endorse.

"Most large incomes are not earned. They are either inherited or are the result of manipulation on the stock exchange. The person who is working for an income either by his hands of his brains is using up his energy and vitality."

Miss Connole announced she would also ask the convention here to endorse the continuance of the federation's own project, its taxation exemption bill which seeks an increase in exemption for single persons under the federal income tax law.

Says Women Must Learn How to Manage Money

Mackinac Island, Mich., July 9 (AP)—Women spend 85 per cent of all the money that is earned in the United States, yet they do not manage the income, Mrs. Bessie Q. Mott of New York told the convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs today.

"There is no country where women need to learn the value of intelligent spending so greatly as here," Miss Mott said.

Speaking in favor of budgeting the family income, Mrs. Mott said until this practice is adopted women will not be the "boss" of their own incomes.

"The trouble with most of us is that we let our money manage us," she said. "We see something tempting in a department store window and we do not stop to consider whether it is practical to purchase it or not. We just buy it."

"Budgeting and saving," Mrs. Mott went on, "are the keys to economic independence. Women already have 80 per cent of the accounts in mutual savings banks in this country, but the percentage would be larger if they did not save spasmodically, but budgeted systematically instead."

AILEEN STANLEY WINS DIVORCE

Chicago, July 9 (AP)—Aileen Stanley, vaudeville and revue singer, won a divorce in Superior Court from her accompanist-husband, Charles N. Buttenuth.

Miss Stanley entered Judge Gemmill's court wearing a severely plain tailored suit reaching to her ankles, a nondescript hat at an unusual angle, and tortoise shell glasses. None might have known her identity had not the bailiff been overheard to whisper to the court clerk, "That's Aileen Stanley."

Killed by Train

Champaign, Ill., July 9 (INS)—Cecil Parker, 23, of Memphis, Tenn., died here today from loss of blood cause dby the amputation of his legs when he fell between cars of a moving freight train.

1 Mourner Whistling Taps Buries War Hero

East Orange, N. J., July 9 (INS)—A hero of the Argonne lies silent in death today in a little plot of ground in the East Orange cemetery. Like many another valiant participant in that memorable battle he lies almost forgotten.

This hero was no dashing officer; no grimly determined ranksman. He was just a dog named "Rags," which trotted gleefully at the side of members of the 11th Regt. of Engineers when all others of his kind had fled in terror at the sound of bursting shells.

"Rags" was wounded by shrapnel and suffered shell shock. But he remained with his regiment for the duration of the war and then he returned to America with Charles Ring of New York. Ring, realizing that New York was no place for a dog that loved action, gave him to Mrs. A. P. Unbehaun of this city, who in turn presented him to Joseph L. Bock, a fireman.

For several years "Rags" never missed a fire and he was a familiar sight on the fire truck as it dashed through the streets.

Bock retired from service a year ago and "Rags" retired with him. He was an old dog then, ready for death.

"Rags'" funeral was an unpretentious affair. No mourners and no marching columns flanked the automobile that carried his body wrapped in an American flag, to the cemetery.

Naval Aide Reports

Portsmouth, N. H., July 9—Chief Boatswain John E. Tourgee of the U. S. Coast Guard reported here as assistant to Commander S. R. Sands, in charge of the First Coast Guard district, with headquarters in this city. Chief Tourgee comes from West Hampton, N. Y., where he was on duty with the fourth district.

Boy Under Circus Tent Killed With Hammer

Montreal, July 9 (INS)—William Keaton of Hartford, Ct., an employe of the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey circus now in this city, was in custody today charged with murder in connection with the death of Joseph Habiger, 14, also of Hartford.

Harbiger succumbed to a fracture of the skull after being struck by a hammer thrown by Keaton when the circus played in that town on July 5.

The young boy was in the act of crawling under the main tent when he was espied by the circus employe. Keaton yelled at the young intruder and flung the heavy weapon at him. Keaton was taken to headquarters and will be extradited to the United States to stand trial.

Mountain Will Be Named After Pope

Teramo, Italy, July 9 (AP)—The name Mt. Pius XI is to be given with ceremony next month to one of the principal peaks of the Gran Sasso group of the Abruzzi mountains. The peak is 7710 feet above the sea. The Pontiff was once an enthusiastic Alpinist.

100,000-ROUND MAGAZINE IN PERIL

By FRANCIS P. O'NEILL,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Camp Devens, July 9—While an investigation was being made today to ascertain the cause of the fire that razed a storehouse here, with $10,000 damage, the citizen soldiers at the camp were being praised for the battle they made against the flames.

The fire threatened to spread to the entire area of the Citizens' Military Training Camp, as the blazing tinder-like structure of the 13th Infantry Regulars sent sparks toward the quarters of the novice soldiers.

When fire call was sounded, the citizen soldiers and national guardsmen of the 26th Division, together with the regulars stationed at the camp, hastened to the scene and tried to save the building. Their first efforts to "string" a line of hose, however, resulted in only a thin stream of water being played upon the building.

CARTRIDGES EXPLODE

Exploding cartridges in the 109,000-round magazine of the storehouse, giving the rookies a taste of real warfare, made it necessary to clear the area of all but the firefighters.

Upon arrival of the regular fire department of the reservation, the task of battling the flames was taken up in a manner that brought commendation. The boys of the C. M. T. C. and the National Guard organized bucket brigades, wetting the roof of the adjoining barracks.

Maj.-Gen. Alfred F. Foote, commanding officer of the division, had Maj. Roland H. Choate, divisional provost marshal, summon the military police, who were soon in action. They cleared the fire zone of all troops, and the firemen were given a free hand. In the meantime the discharge of ammunition continued, ending with one big blast that shook all the buildings in the area. Soon afterward the fire was brought under control.

FULL QUOTA REACHED

Arrival of 800 officers and men, members of the 101st Field Artillery, comprising units from Commonwealth Armory, Boston, Headquarters Battery, First Battalion of Boston, Batteries D of New Bedford, E of Brockton and F of Taunton, brought the 26th Division of the Massachusetts National Guard up to its full quota. They brought 600 horses.

The field artillery arrived in camp after being on the road since Saturday, when they left Waltham. Members of the field artillery, the last of the National Guard units to reach the camp, started immediately in their tour of duty by laying 13 miles of telephone and communication wire on the range. This is the largest number of men and horses in camp since the war.

Tuesday started off with a bang around camp. Things are moving in great shape, and with close to 10,000 men in camp, the local army post is a busy place.

Maj.-Gen. Foote has injected plenty of action into the camp. His directing of the raids over the week-end, his snappy address to over 300 officers of the National Guard Monday, in which he told the officers that they must be shaved and have a clean shirt and collar each day was the topic of much comment.

SEVEN BANDS AT CAMP

Gen. Foote issued another sharp order that made a decided impression with the men. There are seven bands now at the camp. Today Gen. Foote notified in general orders leaders of the bands that he is planning to have a competition which will start tomorrow. Gen. Foote also stated, "I am going to have my bands dressed up better. We have seven of the best army bands in the country at the present time stationed at Camp Devens. Their uniforms are too drab. I have issued orders asking regimental commanders to see that the men have a more snappy appearance that play in these bands, I want them to wear additional colors that will give the band a snappy appearance. These bands are not playing mournful music. After this week I am sure that our bands will have the snappiest appearance of any musical organization in the country. Bands that are snappily dressed make a splendid parade appearance. There will be no more dull appearance of army bands at Camp Devens.

From now on will be busy days at Camp Devens. Army national guard officials are looking forward to the handling of 75,000 visitors next Sunday, which will be the official first visiting day since the national guard arrived here. Capt. Samuel E Murray of the tank company, who has charge of the military police, declared today that he will have over 600 military police on duty Sunday. As this is the first Sunday that the 1500 students of the Citizens Military Training Camps from all over New England have been in camp, the authorities here are looking for visits from their parents and friends.

The first big review of the tour of the National Guard since the arrival here last Friday will come on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock when Maj.-Gen. Preston Brown of the First Corps Area will be present as the guest of the National Guard and he will be tendered a review on that day. Hundreds of visitors are also expected on that afternoon.

Special Officer Mark E. Madden Detective Sergt. Robert F. Mooney Salvatore Damore Santo Damore Mrs. Santo Damore

The ransom letter to Mr. and Mrs. Santo Damore is one of the most important clues police have in the search for the slayer of salvatore Damore after being paid $5000 to return him to his parents. Boston detectives working on the case are shown inspecting the missive. Mr. and Mrs. Damore, who are on the verge of complete collapse as a result of the slaying of their son. Mrs. Damore, after reading of the finding of a boy's body, went to the morgue and identified it as that of her son. She told police she paid $5000 ransom to kidnapers for the return of Salvatore. Despite the payment the boy was not returned. (Staff photos.)

'UNTIN' BOWLER PLANE SILENT

Ottawa, July 9 (AP)—With no direct word from the 'Untin' Bowler for three days, the exact whereabouts of the Chicago-Berlin plane was a matter of conjecture today.

The hum of its motor, picked up by the radio station at Cape Hope's Advance, west of Port Burwell, yesterday, indicated the plane was in the air, but whether it was continuing its flight toward Greenland, or merely up to receive weather reports was not known.

The last message from the plane was received Friday and was almost undecipherable, but was interpreted to say that the plane was landing at Great Whale, on James Bay, because of bad weather.

HITS STIMSON AND RESIGNS

Manila, July 9 (INS)—Charging that former Governor-General Stimson did not give him the proper support in his efforts to end graft in the Government, Insular Auditor Wright today had resigned his post.

Aguinaldo, famous Filipino patriot, has joined a movement tending to secure the retention of Wright as auditor. Whether Wright will remain probably will be decided when he confers with the new governor-general, Dwight F. Davis.

King's Visit to Pope Put Off to October

Rome, July 9 (INS)—The proposed visit of King Victor Emanuel and other members of the Italian royal family to Pope Pius XI at the Vatican has been indefinitely postponed, it was learned today.

Originally plans were made for the meeting of the monarch and pontiff—the first since the reconciliation of the church and state—on July 16. However, according to the newspaper, Popolo Di Roma, the visit will not take place until October.

Woman Going Over Niagara Falls in Rubber Ball

Buffalo, N. Y., July 8 (AP)—Mrs. Molly Semsen of Flint, Mich., has announced she is preparing to make an attempt to duplicate the feat of Jean Lussie in going over Niagara Falls in a rubber ball. She motored here from Flint to secure official sanction.

Mrs. Semsen plans to dare the cataract Labor day. The vehicle in which she intends to make the trip is under construction by a Cleveland rubber firm. The woman has been in the dare-devil business 20 years, she said.

plicated in the murder. They believe the slayers, confident of their security, are walking about in the North End today.

Police obtained information today that the murdered boy was seen alive as late as June 25, five days after being kidnaped.

LAST SEEN IN LYNN.

According to their information he was seen in Lynn with a man. It is the police theory that this man is one of the two they are seeking.

Working today on the case were postal inspectors, three State detectives, two district attorneys, three Boston Inspectors, three Lynn inspectors and two Saugus police officers.

The postal inspectors are interested solely because of the letters that went through the mails between the Damore boy's father and the extortionists, one of which, written pathetically by the father, said:

"I will come to St. Anthony's Church with the money. You give me my boy with one hand. I give you the money with one hand. You take the money. I take the boy.

"I will meet you any place you say, and I will be there. Please, I ask you, don't harm my little boy. I want him back. His mother wants him back. You are hurting his mother even more than you hurt me.

"Please give me Salvatore and I promise that I will say nothing to nobody."

Because of the condition of the body, it is impossible yet for medical authorities to state in what manner he was killed. They believe he was either strangled, poisoned or stabbed.

MAGRATH TAKES BODY.

Medical Examiner George B. Magrath was to take the body today to Harvard Medical School for an exhaustive examination.

It is the opinion of investigating officers that the boy was killed because his father had refused to pay a demand of $10,000 which was made upon him five months ago by the man the police are now seeking.

When Santi Damore, the father refused to bow to the demands he received a threat that he would be followed day and night until he was killed.

The slaying has stirred the North End as well as the entire State, as no other crime has ever done.

As far as some of the oldest police officials in Boston could recollect there was never a crime of similar type committed here. While there have been a few kidnapings and demands for ransom, there is no record of a slaying committed after ransom money had been paid.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Damore are emphatic in their assertions that they had felt $5000 behind the wall of St. Anthony's Catholic Church, in Revere, on June 25, on the promise that their boy would be returned to them in two hours alive and well.

The fact that the three letters mailed to the father of the boy were all postmarked from Lynn, together with the fact that it is doubtful that the slayers would attempt to carry the body across a busy highway from a parked automobile, strengthens the theory that the boy met his death outside of Boston and probably in Lynn.

FAMILIAR WITH MARSH

That the slayer was familiar with the marsh lands was obvious from the position where the body was found. It is the only spot in the wide expanse of marsh where there is a mound behind which the body could be placed. It is impossible to sight the spot even from the electric cars which pass in both directions every six minutes during the day.

According to Mike Senda, who communicated with the boy's father shortly after news of his disappearance was made public nearly three weeks ago, he saw Salvatore step out of an automobile on Commercial st., with other boys shortly before 6 o'clock.

He said that the machine, a small sedan, contained a man and a woman whom he could not describe. Senda told the boy's father and the police that he heard the man say he would be back in a few minutes and asked Salvatore to await his recovery.

Senda also said that on his suggestion the boy came and sat beside him on his front doorsteps while he awaited the return of the man who had promised to take him to Revere Beach, but who, according to the theory, probably was plotting the boy's death.

Senda said he asked the boy if he knew the people in the machine, and Salvatore replied, "Sure I do. They are going to take me to Revere Beach and let me ride on all the things down there."

"How long are they going to keep you down there? Won't your mother expect you home?" Senda said he asked.

To this he quoted Salvatore as saying, "Oh, I will be back home in an hour."

Senda said that the mysterious automobile returned in 20 minutes with the man and the woman. He said it drew up alongside of the curb and that the woman called to the boy by his first name, "Salvatore."

With his face covered with smiles and after a parting salute, "See you tomorrow." Senda said the boy dashed to the automobile and was soon away on what was probably his last ride.

The police believe the kidnapers carried out their promise to the boy of a good time at Revere Beach. To check up on this angle, two officers went to the amusement resort today to question amusement owners and their employes. The officers carried with them a recent photo of the dead boy.

SOUGHT FIVE DAYS

When Salvatore failed to return to his home on the night of June 20 his father notified the police of the Hanover street station and a search was instituted.

After the search was in progress for five days, the father received a special delivery letter on June 25 from Lynn demanding $5000 for the safe return of his son.

The father, interested more in the safe return of his son than police prosecution, and frightened by the bold threats which the notes contained, acceded to the warning that he must not report the letter to the police or tell his friends about it.

Tucking the letter carefully into the inside pocket of his coat Damore told not even his wife lest the fact that a black hand note had been received leak out.

This note, which was the first threat, read as follows:

"You have been looking in the water for your kid. We have got him, and you don't have to look in the water for him. If you want your boy back you get $5000 and put it behind St. Anthony's Church at exactly midnight tonight. St. Anthony's Church in Revere, we mean. You know where that is. You will find a box there, but if it is not there wrap the money up in a red handkerchief and a piece of newspaper and put it against the wall.

"Don't you dare to tell the police or any of your relatives or friends. Go there in your machine, put the money where we have told you and don't look around. Get back into the car and go directly to your home and your boy will be left at your door in two hours. Remember, do not tell the police or your friends. If you do, we will follow you day and night, and we will fix you.

"When your boy is brought back, tell the police and your friends he was on a vacation."

In discussing the slaying of his son with a Boston Evening American reporter today, the father said,

"I have tried to understand why they should have taken my boy from me. I have an enemy and I have my suspicions who may have killed the boy, but I must not mention names when I have only suspicion to base my statements on.

"I know that my child was murdered. He never was in Saugus or Lynn in his life, and I am told that it would be impossible to get to Saugus marsh if he had drowned in Boston."

CRUSH REVOLT IN RUMANIA WITH EASE

Peasant Government Routs Plotters Suspected of an Alliance With Carol

Vienna, July 9 (AP)—The Peasant Government of Rumania, headed by Julius Maniu, Premier, appeared today to have weathered successfully a projected military coup de'etat, and to be entrenched more firmly than ever at Bucharest.

As a result of strict censorship the only direct advices obtainable were contained in an official Government communique, which said:

"Some civil agitators, known for a long time to the authorities as men without scruple or worth, organized a ridiculous plot against the form of the state, without causing the least disorder.

"The head conspirator is former Col. August Stojka. They could achieve nothing except the adhesion of two officers, Capt. Cambra and Lieut. Georgescu. Some factory workmen also joined the plotters. All are arrested.

"Investigations are being continued. All sensational reports of disorders are without foundation and perfect quiet reigns in the country. Order is secured in all particulars and the army is as ever at its post."

Other reports, notably those received from travelers arriving here from the Rumanian capital, were more disquieting, but even they indicated the government had the situation well in hand.

There was some conjecture as to a possible connection of former Crown Prince Carol with the plot. Paris reports said he was preparing to leave that city for Bled, Jugoslavia, where he would see his son, the boy King Michael, while in other quarters there were reports he was expected at Velnes, Southern Slavia, to see his mother, Queen Marie.

Among names mentioned in connection with the plot was that of former Minister-General Angelescu, who was said to have been a prime mover with the object of making himself dictator until further developments which might or might not have placed Carol on the throne.

FLIERS NEAR 175 HOUR RECORD

Culver City, Cal., July 9 (AP)—Determined to stick by their plane until its engine quits, L. W. Mendell and R. B. Reinhart, entered the 168th hours of their endurance flight at 6:30 o'clock (Pacific time) this morning. The plane was refuelled early today with enough gasoline to run it until midnight.

At 6:30 o'clock only seven hours separated Mendell and Reinhart from the record of 174 hours, 59 seconds established three days ago by Roy L. Mitchell and Byron K. Newcomb at Cleveland.

If the Culver City fliers remain in the air until 2:30 (Pacific time) this afternoon, they will have broken all existing records for sustained flight and will have exceeded the Cleveland record by one hour.

7 GIRLS, 11 MEN IN STRIKE RIOT

New York, July 9 (INS)—Eighteen persons, seven of them young women, were arrested today in a clash between striking fur workers and non-strikers in W. 30th st.

The disturbance caused excitement throughout the garment center. The strikers are some of the 600 members of the left wing fur workers' division of the Needle Trade Industries Union—an organization not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The non-strikers belong to the latter group, through membership in the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union.

WINE AND FIRE-ARMS; TROUBLE

Andover, July 9—Charles Cherry's cherry wine is very potent. He admitted as much to the police today. He is alleged to have threatened three Andover policemen with a shotgun and revolver when they went to his home in Chester st., Ballardvale, in response to neighbor's telephone calls.

In court at Lawrence today he was charged with drunkenness and assault with a dangerous weapon on a policeman.

According to Policeman John Deyermond, William Shaw and George Dane, Cherry was standing in the middle of the road with shotgun to shoulder aimed at them when they stepped out of an automobile. Shaw wrested the gun from him. The case will be disposed of tomorrow.

9 DEATHS FROM HEAT WAVE IN EAST

Boston Gets Relief in Cool East Wind; One Prostration at Revere

While other cities on the Atlantic seaboard, including New York, sizzled today, faithful old East Wind, with a dash of the south in it, came to Boston's relief, smashing the heat wave that had gripped the city for three days.

Smothering heat enveloped much of the eastern part of the country and a wide section of the South. Washington sweltered in the hottest weather of the season. Two deaths and seven prostrations were reported there with a temperature of 103 degrees.

Seven deaths in New York city were attributed indirectly to the heat during 24 hours. Six were from drowning.

COLLAPSES IN REVERE

One heat prostration was reported in Revere shortly before noon today, even as cooling breezes were sweeping that city. Nathan Muttorperl, 40, of Grove st., Chelsea, collapsed at Ocean ave. and Beach st. He was removed to Chelsea Memorial Hospital and later to his home.

Boston's relief came early. At 4 a. m. the wind shifted to northeast, then to east and finally southeast. Temperatures tumbled quickly. There was a 6-degree drop between 9 and 11 a. m., when the mercury registered 67 degrees, 19 degrees lower than yesterday at the same hour.

At 10 a. m. the temperature in New York city was 86, or 16 degrees higher than in Boston, 238 miles distant. No relief in New York was expected before tomorrow.

Forecast for Boston and Vicinity: Partly cloudy, probably with local showers late tonight or Wednesday; slightly warmer Wednesday; moderate south and southwest winds.

NEW YORK IS HOT.

Weather conditions: The depression that was over the Provinces Monday morning has passed off eastward and that which was over the upper Mississippi Valley moved northeastward to western Ontario. The pressure has increased over the Provinces to 30.16 inches over Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and continues near 30.22 on the Carolina coast. The northwestern high pressure has moved southeastward and is central this morning over Kansas with highest reading of 30.22 at Concordia. Fair weather has prevailed excepting local showers over Florida and the southern portions of the eastern Gulf States with amounts exceeding one inch at a number of stations, and in the central valleys and western lake region where moderate amounts have occurred excepting 2.00 inches at Wichita, Kans., and 2.02 at Davenport, Iowa. The temperature this morning in the central portion of the country ranges from near 62 in the lower Missouri Valley to 76 in the Ohio Valley, and in New England generally between 62 and 72.

The morning readings with maximum and minimum for the preceding 24 hours:

DELAY LIGHT PRICE HEARING

A hearing on the petition of customers of New Bedford Gas & Edison Light Company for a reduction in electric light and gas rates, scheduled for today at the State House, was postponed to September by the State Department of Public Utilities upon request of the petitioners.

Attorney Jacob Minkin, counsel for the petitioners, told the Public Utilities Commissioners the petitioners, desired to study a new schedule of rates recently filed by the company. He later explained that although this schedule was supposed to show a reduction in rates, the petitioners are not satisfied with it.

Attorney Robert G. Dodge, counsel for the company, agreed to the postponement.

Among those present were Councilmen H. N. Sundin, John Wright and Leo Carney of New Bedford.

Sundin put a resolution through the New Bedford City Council requesting Mayor Ashley to move for lower rates, but upon his alleged failure to act Sundin organized a group of consumers to petition the State Department of Public Utilities for a reduction.

MITCHELL MAY ALTER POLICY ON MERGERS

Washington, July 9 (IS)—A less benevolent attitude in furnishing advice to corporations considering large mergers as to legality of their prospective cominations may be adopted by the Department of Justice, as a result of conferences between Atty.-Gen. Mitchell and John Lord O'Brian, assistant to the Attorney-General, it was learned today.

In this conenction it was said the department is investigating carefully all big combinations of business, at present having more than 60 inquiries under way. While formerly the department did not usually make investigations until complaints were filed, all mergers coming to the attention of the anti-trust division are now put under scrutiny.

ADOPT WARY ATTITUDE.

A possible modification of the policy by Atty. Gen. Sargent and his first assistant, Col. William J. Donovan, has been seriously considered. Under that system officials of the merging corporations were permitted to lay their cards on the table at the department. They weer given informal information of any possible violations, or informed there appeared to be nothing contrary to the Sherman or Clayton laws. This attitude was based upon an interpretation that these laws were preventive measures as well as punitive.

It is now believed projective merging corporations will not get much information out of the department in the future, owing to the more wary attitude of the Mitchell administration.

FLOOD OF CONSOLDIATIONS.

The matter assumes considerable significance in view of the ever-widening tendency for consolidations. This economic change is extending to all phases of commerce and industry from banking to manufacturing and trading.

Official reports show there were 1238 large mergers between 1919 and 1929, involving 4135 concerns. Among the mergers were 124 oil companies, 270 iron and steel and 128 in the food industry. Records indicated that consolidation has been a general movement rather than one confined to any particular industry.

"The present mergers are unlike those of the great combination period at the end of the 19th century," said the report of the President's committee on recent economic changes. "In the earlier instances, the incentives were usually the formation of a monopoly. The present mergers often appear to be quickly followed by new financing, thus implying that the desire for additional capital is an important motive."

RESCUE 18, END SEA MYSTERY

London, July 9 (AP)—With rescue of 18 survivors of the Swedish steamer Botte, wrecked near Yarmouth on a sand bank Saturday night, an explanation has been offered of a mysterious North Sea explosion, which led to fear of a major sea disaster.

A Dutch steamer took the officers and crew of the Botte off when it was seen she would founder. Later the steamer Arneberg, in the same locality, wirelessed Lloyd's an unidentified ship had sunk nearby after an explosion.

Capt. Borreson of the Botte said he was convinced the explosion was due to the Botte's hatches blowing off when the tide came up, and it slipped off the sand bank into deep water, long after the crew had been taken off.

Fire Causes $3000 Damage to Rugs

Damage of $3000 was caused by a fire in the quarters of 834 Washington st., occupied by J. Georakian & Son, rug dealers. The salesrooms are on the second floor of a four-story brick building. A pedestrian going by noticed smoke issuing from one of the windows, and sounded an alarm. Firemen found the blaze centering in a quantity of rugs, and subdued it before it gained any great headway. Additional damage is said to have been done other rugs by smoke and water. Fire officials said the blaze originated from a cigarette.

Paradise of Telephone Girls to Vanish

Paris, July 9 (INS)—French "hello girls" are to go. Automatic telephones are to replace the temperamental Parisian "Central" as fast as they can be installed.

This new move to introduce American efficiency methods into Paris will do away with one of the most typical phases of Parisian life.

The French telephone girls are permitted to "talk back" if they feel that the person at the other end of the wire is "getting sassy," and the French are notorious for their volubility.

The "big business man" is completely in the operator's power and if his own tones are not sufficiently honied to suit the young woman at the central station he finds himself in a barrage of language, and called some names that are far from flattering.

Complaints have seldom received satisfaction because the telephone system is a government monopoly and there is much red tape before any complaint gets official attention.

Two districts of Paris are now entering upon the new regime of the automatic switchboard and others will follow.

Another phase of Americanization will be the establishing of public telephone booths all over the city.

G. O. P. TO NOTE 75TH YEAR AT WORCESTER

More than 2000 stalwarts of the G. O. P. are expected to attend the 75th anniversary exercises of the party in Worcester on Saturday, July 20.

Plans for the birthday festivities were discussed at the Hotel Bellevue by the executive committee of the Republican State Committee.

The committee in charge of the anniversary presented a program which was approved. On this committee were: Chairman Amos L. Taylor of the state committee Mrs. Frank R. Batchelder, vice-chairman of the state committee; Frank B. Hall of Worcester, Francis Prescott of Grafton and Ernest P. Bennett of the Worcester city committee.

The plans call for a luncheon at the Hotel Bancroft at which will be present as guests of the Republican State committee, the chairman and a woman representative of every city and town committee in the State as well as members of the Republican State committee and heads of various Republican organizations within the State. U. S. Senator Frederick H. Gillett, Republican members of Congress, Governor Allen, State officials and Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Louis K. Liggett, national committee members, also will be present.

Ends Life When She Fails to Find Hubby

Chicago, July 9 (INS)—Because she had failed to get a husband in the four years she has been in this country to establish a home for her parents in Germany, Margaret Reschke, 24, swallowed poison here today. Thbe girl died before doctors could be summoned.

Meyer Gordon, in whose home the young woman worked as a maid, told police Margaret wished to find a husband and bring her parents to this country.

Engineer Dies at 90

Redding, Cal., July 9 (INS)—Samuel E. Brackins, 90, who studied civil engineering with the late James J. Hill, was dead here today.

Burglar Caught in Dewey's Apartment

Warsaw, Poland, July 9 (AP)—Police captured Bernard Trzaska, a notorious burglar, in the apartments of Charles S. Dewey, American financial advisor to Poland, later frustrating his attempt at suicide.

Thbe burglar tried to hang himself with strips of his shirt tied to the bars of his cell window. The guards cut him down in time to save his life. Trzaska was released from jail in June after serving two years for participation in a robbery of the French embassy in Warsaw in 1927.

"RACKET" BOSS HAD MARLOW SLAIN

New York, July 9—The leader of a secret Italian racketeering fraternity is sought for procuring the murder of Frankie Marlow, Broadway sports promoter, Police Commissioner Whalen disclosed.

The man sought has plenty of money and is widely known in New York city, Whalen said. He has not been known as a gangster and he fled the state, the commissioner added, since Marlow was thrown from an automobile near Flushing the night of June 24, dying from three pistol bullets.

"If the man we seek does not give himself up soon, I will announce his name," Whalen said. "He is the head of a powerful group in this city and we know he had extensive dealings with Marlow."

Friends of Marlow have disclosed he was racketeering collector for a gang of Brooklyn blackmailers, occasionally known by that vague name, the Mafia. This uncertainly defined gang specialized in a simple racket, which consisted of finding a man with money and demanding part of it under threat of death.

Marlow was a boxing promoter and it was a custom of the gang to wait until a boxing manager had made big money before separating him from some of it with threats.

The gang is reported to have demanded money from a boxing manager just after the manager's fighter had won a big fight. The story goes that this manager thus blackmailed had appealed to Marlow, who had promised to square the matter for him for $1000.

The manager paid the money and Marlow did not turn it over to the gang for which he was collector. A row resulted, in which Marlow was taken for a preliminary ride which ended when the gang stripped him naked and left him shivering by the roadside.

Marlow was defiant and the next time he was taken for a ride he did not come back, except in the form of a problem which confronts police.

Coast Guard Drowned

Buffalo, N. Y., July 9 (INS)—Boatswain Jack Moore, of Brooklyn, N. Y., commander of Coast-guard boat No. 164, was drowned when the barge in which he was riding capsized in the barge canal here, due to swells from a large steamer.

DRINK, CRIME, INSANITY GAIN IN BELGIUM

Brussels, Belgium, July 9 (INS)—Belgium has decided to modify the partial prohibition law on the ground it has greatly fostered crime and drunkenness.

For the past eight years the prohibition measure against distilled liquors has been in effect. Light wines and beer were never banned.

However, since the passage of the partial prohibiton act in 1920 the consumption of alcoholic drinks has risen to four times what it was before the law was enected.

Fines for drunkenness have risen steadily. In 1928 there were 7959 fines imposed for drunkenness, while in pre-prohibition years the average was 4000.

According to official statistics, crime has shown a similar increase. Alcoholic insanity cases have increased 100 per cent.

Restriction of distilled liquor resulted in "bootlegging" and secret drinking of gin and whiskey. "Speak easies" in which the forbidden beverages are sold became dens of vice.

The decision to modify the prohibition measure followed an investigation of conditions throughout the kingdom.

Miss Feinstein to Wed New York Man

Announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Feinstein of Roxbury, to Sol Mannes, of New York, was made at a tea and bridge at the Ritz Carlton hotel. The couple will be wed July 21 at Temple Mishkan Tefila, Roxbury, and will tour the St. Lawrence river and Great Lakes on their honeymoon. They will live in New York. Miss Feinstein is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Feinstein of 22 Greenheys st. She has been secretary to a Boston attorney.

Becomes Bay Stater So Solon-Bride Can Hold Office

In order that the bride-to-be may remain a member of the Massachusetts General Court, Maj. Walter DuBois Brookings, betrothed to Representative Martha N. Brooks of Gloucester, has arranged to change his residence from Alexandria, Va., to Gloucester.

Under the law, the residence of a husband is the residence of his wife, provided she is living with him. Maj. Brookings and Miss Brooks are to be married this summer, and in order to avoid any question of the latter remaining a representative from the 18th Essex District, Maj. Brookings has chosen to become a resident of Massachusetts.

SPEAR TO TEST AIRPLANE LAW

Old Orchard Beach, Me., July 9—State Senator Arthur G. Spear of Portland was notified by Chief of Police O'Brien by telephone that a warrant for his arrest, charging solicitation of passengers for his commercial airplane at this resort, had been issued by Judge Harris of the Biddeford Police Court.

The senator acknowledged service and promised to be in police court this afternoon for a hearing.

The case against Senator Spear is looked upon as a test case to decide just how far the Old Orchard authorities can go in prohibiting commercial planes from operating on the beach and deciding other regulations pertaining to the operations of aircraft at this resort.

SQUATTERS ON COMMON MAY WALK OUT

Boston's "night life" threatens to leave the Hub flat on its municipal axle.

Residents of an exclusive section of the city are ready to abandon their homes, taking with them an institution that has become as much a part of Boston as the culture they speak about.

Official interference with rights of residences, without first consulting the occupants, has aroused nocturnal dwellers of lanes off Lafayette mall to a high state of indignation.

The tearing up of the sidewalk and noise caused by city workmen repairing Tremont st. has caused a serious situation on Boston Common among the regular residents.

They did not hesitate to express this anger at the City of Boston powers that be early today.

With a toe peeping out from between the sole and upper of a dilapidated shoe as he raised himself to a sitting position, one of the regular residents called out to a passer-by in the hour just before dawn:

"Say, Buddy, come here.

"This is what you call real tough having to sleep on this damp grass," he began, concluding with a request for the price of coffee.

Before a chance was given for a sympathetic expression for the homeless he became pessimistically philosophic as he arose from the greensward, adjusting the stout rope that held his trousers in place.

Back in 1866 Stock Fire Insurance companies established the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

The National Board membership now consists of 239 Stock Fire Insurance companies. Through its various departments and by virtue of its maintaining the largest privately owned testing laboratories devoted to the conservation of life and property, it performs real, worth-while public service.

These individual companies from all parts of the world, while competitors in business, have nevertheless joined forces in this work. Responsible agents represent one or more of these companies in every community.

CLAIMS WORLD CAN'T PRODUCE TOO MUCH

Amsterdam, Holland, July 9 (AP)—The need of adequate international industrial statistics as an aid to world progress was stressed by Magnus W. Alexander, president of the national industrial conference board of New York, in an address today before the International Chamber of Commerce.

"Production capacity in various industries the world over has increased to a point where balance output, which is the basis for stable industrial activity, has become a paramount world economic problem," said Mr. Alexander.

"Productivity alone creates purchasing power and, hence, all the world's industries could not possibly produce too much, for each product in effect, in a well-balanced market, should be a demand for other products.

"Yet, it seems the irony of fate than many industries are continually harrassed with the problem of overproduction, while at the same time poverty is still widespread in many lands and millions of human beings live in want and even on the brink of starvation.

"In the last anaylsis, therefore, it is the proper co-ordination of production, the proper balancing of the various economic activities, which makes possible the economic equilibrium that reflects itself in stable business conditions."

ITEREST IN CHINA.

Although the special committee considering the economic and financial rehabilitation of China has decided to present no formal resolution to a plenary sitting of the convention, the question of China's economic situation is still engaging attention, especially of British and American delegates.

Measures to prevent falsification of letters of credit, corrupt commercial practices, the protection of industrial property and of patents on inventions, the preparation of industrial property and of patents on inventions, the preparation of industrial satistics, double taxation of foreign corporations, the transfer of goods by rail, airplane and automobile as well as highway finance occupied the second day's sessions of the technical committees.

HIT U. S. TARIFF

In the interests of economic harmony and peace, the American delegates are striving to keep the proposed revised American tariffs from being discussed in the open plenary session, feeling that any precipitate attacks or criticisms at this time could only react unfavorably on the United States Congress.

There is much discussion, however, of the tariff question behind the scenes among British, French and other foreign delegates who express anxiety of the affect higher tariffs would have on European trade.

Fall River Mill to Sell Securities

Fall River, July 9—The B. M. C. Durfee Trust was authorized by the stockholders of the Osborn Mills at a special meeting held to sell all securities covered by the corporation's mortgage bonds.

It was also voted that if the sale exceeded the amount due on the bonds, the surplus be paid to the treasurer.

The Osborn Mills have been inactive for several months and the decision was taken following a recommendation made by the directors some time ago.

Miss Kelly to Wed Boston Auto Man

Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Kelly of Saxton st., Dorchester, anonunced the engagement of their daughter, Margaret C. Kelly, to Roger S. Ormberg of Boston. Miss Kelly is employed by the Boston Evening American and Ormberg is connected with an automobile concern.

GIRLS FROM 13 COLLEGES IN SOCIAL STUDY

New York, July 9 (INS)—Enrolled for a month's course in social work, 13 college girls—one from each of the leading women's colleges—have begun a study here of child welfare, health, housing, immigration, labor problems and juvenile delinquency.

Miss Clare M. Tousley, assistant director of the Charity Organization Society, welcomed the girls at headquarters.

Today they took up the problem of tuberculosis in a great city, beginning withm a lecture by Dr. H. A. Pattison, supervisor of medical social service of the National Tuberculosis Association, and followed by talks on case work and a visit to the medical center.

Other lecturers will be Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telegraph and Telephone Co. and chairman of the Charity Organization Society Board; Lawson Purdy, secretary of the Commission that drafted the multiple dwelling law; Bernard J. Fagan, chief probation officer of the children's court; Porter R. Lee, director of the New York School of Social Work; Dr. Charles Johnson, recently of the National Urban League, and Miss Frieda Miller, director of the department of women in industry of the New York State Department of Labor.

The girls and the colleges from which they come are:

Poisoned Liquor Is Fatal to U. S. Dry Agent

Providence, July 9 (AP)—Fred L. Allen, chief raider of United States prohibition forces for Rhode Island, died in Pawtucket as the result of septic poisoning caused by breaking a pimple on his nose.

It is believed by fellow-prohibition agents that Allen contracted the infection through handling poisonous alcohols, moonshine whiskey, mash, other liquors and copper stills.

Youth Admits He Shot Policeman

Washington, July 9—Alfred Aldridge, 20-year-old brother of Albert Aldridge, negro, escaped prisoner from the Massachusetts State Prison, who was killed by Patrolman Harry J. McDonald here, told police that he shot McDonald accidentally when Albert grabbed his arm as the pair made their break for freedom. They were captured following a drug store robbery, and the policeman was shot as he was getting out of his car to pull in the call for the patrol wagon to take his prisoners to the station.

MOTHERS VISIT PLAYGROUNDS

Many Newton mothers joined their children on the playgrounds of that city to watch their organized play under the guidance of competent instructors when the vacation season opened. Mothers went to the playground for the double purpose of obtaining relief from heat and also observing their kiddies indulge in various games.

A brook running through Newton Centre playground, one of the finest playgrounds in New England, served as an extra attraction for the youngsters. They paddled to heart's content in its cooling waters.

The intention of the playground department is to intelligently direct the pastimes of the children during vacation period to keep them off the streets and thus avoid automobile accidents.

The other Massachusetts couples are:

U. S. Attorney in Hub to Press Indictment

Hayward Harding of New York, special assistant to the United States Attorney-General, has reported for duty at the office of United States Atty. Frederick H. Tarr, and will promptly take steps to seek the removal to the New York district of several local individuals who are named defendants in a secret indictment pending at Brooklyn.

The indictment was returned a few weeks ago, and reports at the time had it that about 150 persons and firms were named. The identity of the local defendants is still a secret, so far as Harding is concerned. He stated he would not make the names public until the defendants are arrested.

Ocean Quake Off Brazil Recorded

London, July 9—An earthquake of considerable magnitude in the Atlantic ocean, off Brazil, has been recorded by the Kew Observatory. Four other quakes, with their epicenters in the North Pacific, also have been recorded since July 5.

Grecian Beauties May Be Barred in Vote Fight

Athens, Greece, July 9 (AP)—The government, in opposing a universal suffrage measure today professed favoring exclusion of beautiful women, and women under 35, from the Grecian chamber.

Premier Venizelos promised his support for a municipal woman's suffrage measure, but not for national political franchise, saying to grant universal suffrage would be to flood the country with illiterate voters.

TRAFFIC BOOTH HIT BY TRUCK

A police officer was severely shaken up, the curb traffic box was damaged and waiting automobilists narrowly escaped injury, when a heavy truck laden with groceries crashed into the traffic tower at Broadway and the Revere Beach parkway, Everett, wrecking the box and knocking down the pole bearing the traffic lights in front of waiting automobiles.

John J. Walsh of 33 Jaques st., Somerville, the operator of the truck, which is owned by the Triangle Transportation Co. of 49 Mercantile st., Boston, told police that he was crowded to the curb by other vehicles and could not escape hitting the tower. The truck was slightly damaged.

Traffic Officer Edmund J. Wallace, who was in the booth, was badly shaken up by the impact. He was relieved by Patrolman Everett C. Perkins and went to his home at 95 Glendale st., Everett.

TRIPPI HEARS LIFE PLEA

Nattily attired in a blue serge suit and dancing pumps, Charles Trippi, convicted of the murder of Frederick Pfluger, State prison guard, in Suffolk Superior Court today, listened to arguments on a motion to have him committed to an institution for observation.

The motion, made by Atty. Michael H. Shanley, his counsel, was taken under advisement by Chief Justice Walter P. Hall. The prisoner was remanded to Charles st. jail.

Atty. Shanley said he had been unable to obtain the services of an alienist since yesterday, when permission was granted him to do so.

He said that Dr. L. Vernon Briggs reported Trippi to be suffering from mental deterioration and that a brother is insane and a half-brother an inmate of state prison.

Assistant District Attorney Frederick T. Doyle argued that Dr. Briggs originally examined Trippi n Niovember, 1928, and found the prisoner was not suffering from any mental disease.

FOX IN BRITISH FILM MERGER PLANS

London, July 9 (INS)—The Fox Film Company of America was reported today to be attempting to obtain control of the Gaumont-British Corporation, largest movie combine in Great Britain.

The Fox interests, it is understood, have offered to buy $5,000,000 worth of shares in the British company at 50 cents a share more than the price at which the stock is now selling.

This would place ultimate control of the British company entirely within reach of the Fox concern.

Officials of Gaumont-British admit an offer has been made, but refuse to divulge details. It is said there is considerable opposition among the directors, and it is regarded as certain Fox would have difficulty in asserting control.

It is feared in British film circles the offer may bring about another quarrel similar to that in which the British General Electric Company, Ltd., was concerned.

The British film company was formed in 1927 and dominates the industry in the United Kingdom.

DRIFT TO SEA TO SAVE HAT

An effort to recover a boy's straw hat nearly cost the lives of Jacob Bitcher, 65, of 22 Fessendon rd., Arlington, and his 12-year-old son, Alfred, in the water off Swampscott. Bitcher and his son were at Littles Point in Swampscott when the boy's straw hat was blown into the sea.

Bitcher rushed to a little dory of his, tied to a nearby float and with his son launched out in it without oars. They used the seat of the dory for a paddle. But wind and tide carried them out further.

They were out some three miles at a point between Egg Rock and Nahant and floating helplessly in a rising tide when their predicament was discovered from shore. The police were notified and Patrolman Frank Wall, Fisherman Max Codwise and Alfred Chaisson went out in a small dory after them.

WOMAN LEGION WORKER DIES

East Jaffrey, N. H., July 9—Mrs. Anna B. Butler, 34, wife of Carl A. Butler, is dead today at the Peterboro Hospital. Mrs. Butler went to the hospital four weeks ago. Her infant son, born at that time, lived only a few minutes. Her condition has been serious ever since, a heart weakness complicating other symptoms.

Mrs. Butler was born in Fitchburg and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McCabe of that city. She resided in Montclair, N. J., for a year after her marriage and has lived in this town for 16 years. Besides her parents and husband, she leaves four children, Carl A., Jr., Gertrude, Bernadette and Donald.

Mrs. Butler was president of the American Legion Auxiliary in this town and district representative for the State organization, but was best known for her work as president of the New Hampshire State Auxiliary of the American Legion. She went to Paris in 1927, while president, as the State delegate to the convention, at which time she toured Europe and had an audience with the Pope while in Rome.

Fireman Injured in Charlestown

Nearby residences were menaced and a fireman was injured as flames of undetermined origin swept a three-story unoccupied brick dwelling at 18 Cedar st., Charlestown, today. The loss was estimated at $3000.

Hoseman Edward O. Dowd of Engine 27, who resides on Elm st., Charlestown, was cut by flying glass and was treated at the Haymarket Relief Hospital, where two stitches were taken in his right arm.

Splashing Away the Heat Waves

GEN. EDWARDS LAUDS GREAT WAR NOVEL

Gen. Clarence R. Edwards, who commanded the Yankee Division overseas, thinks that "All Quiet on the Western Front," by Erich Maria Remarque, a German private soldier, which begins in the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday and will continue daily in the Boston Evening American paints one of the truest pictures of the World War from the standpoint of a German soldier.

No book on the war ever published has taken such a hold on the popular mind as "All Quiet on the Western Front." It has swept across Europe, creating a tremendous reaction toward war. It strips war of all its gaudy trappings, and holds up its hideous form that all may see it in its true character.

GENERAL'S OPINION

Gen. Edwards' opinion of "All Quiet on the Western Front" follows:

"I speak a little German and when intelligent people got through the examination of prisoners I would send for them and talk to them intimately because I wanted to gain a picture of their psychology. I was well acquainted with German system before the war. My reaction is that this man is telling the simple truth and records the pulse of the average German soldier, governed and commanded as he was. The book is very interesting.

"I find it next to impossible, in fact I don't want to really draw the picture of what all youth went through in this last war. I am inclined to believe that these diaries and stories from the trenches, especially of the men who stood the gaff for about four years, are about as accurate and will give the public the real picture of the horrors and despair that was in the mind of the doughboy.

LESSON FOR AMERICA

"This book in no wise depicts the psychology of the American doughboy, except as to the academic futility of war. It does emphasize the great mistake that was exceptionally made by a few of our officers who hitched their wagon to the German military star, worshipping the German system and utterly failed to realize the idealism and self-sacrifice of American youth. Our youth must sense his leadership, right to capitalize his peculiarities, his initiative and self-confidence, which I believe is due to the glory of our equal opportunity.

"I know few descriptions that are more accurate in depicting the kind of leadership and system that should be avoided in relying on the American to win battles."

Start this story in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser, and then continue it every day in the Boston Evening American.

FARM SURVEY IN VERMONT

Bellows Falls, Vt., July 9—A land utilization survey to cover 15 towns in Vermont has been started and is to be conducted co-operatively by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, the Vermont Agricultural Station and the State Department of Forestry. Six men will be employed during the summer under direction of C. F. Clayton of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Washington, D. C.

Hill towns of the State have been chosen, because it is found that these seem to have the most abandoned land. Land which is apparently very good agricultural land, or first-class forestry land, needs no attention in this study. The object of this survey is to find out what the land is being used for now, and what is the best possible use to which it can be put.

Members of the advisory board of the Boston C. T. A. U. met in St. Joseph's branch rooms, 23 Blossom st., West End, to consider plans for attendance at the national convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America at the Catholic Summer School, Cliff Haven, N. Y., the first week of August.

Bruise Fatal to Girl Two Weeks After

A slight injury received more than two weeks ago while she was bathing at Carson Beach, South Boston, resulted in the death of Alice Morrow, 15, of 15 Whittier st., Roxbury, at the City Hospital.

Death was due to erysipelas which developed from a small cut over the girl's left eye, according to Medical Examiner Timothy J. Leary. Because of the unusual circumstances surrounding the death, a police investigation has been ordered.

Miss Morrow was lying on the shore at the beach on June 23, when a stone thrown by a boy at play struck her over the eye. The wound, although almost negligible, was treated by an attendant at the beach.

The girl thought no more of the injury until long after she had arrived home. She then felt a sharp pain in her head and notified her mother. The pain became more and more intense until finally the girl's mother brought her to the out-patient department of the Roxbury Hospital on Mt. Vernon st. Here the wound was dressed again.

On the fourth day she became too ill to make the trip. Finally she was brought to the hospital in an automobile and admitted. A few days later erysipelas had set in and the patient was transferred to the City Hospital.

For the past few days physicians felt that the girl was rapidly recovering. However, complications developed and the girl died. Because of the nature of the case, Medical Examiner Leary was notified. Later he called in the police.

SAVAGE DOG ATTACKS BOY

Worcester, July 9—George Semon, 11, son of Mrs. Lily Semon of West Auburn, was so severely injured by a German police dog which attacked him in that town, that City Hospital surgeons here fear it will be necessary to amputate his left arm.

The boy was canvassing the district in an effort to enlarge his newspaper route and was about to enter the home of L. A. Davis in Prospect st. when the dog jumped on him, knocked him down, and began to bite him.

Davis called off the dog and brought the boy to the City Hospital in an automobile. They boy was found to be suffering from many bites in the arms and legs, one wound in his left thigh being 10 inches long.

200 Soldiers Guard Manchuria Governor

Peking, China, July 9—Chang Hsueh-Liang, Governor of Manchuria, who is the most carefully guarded individual in the Far East and perhaps in the world, conferred with President Chiang Kai-Shek regarding the Russian situation arising out of the recent raid on the Soviet Consulate in Harbin. It was the first time that the two men had met.

Chang, who was accompanied from Mukden by a bodyguard of 1400 men, also brought nine automobiles. He occupies two floors of one wing of the Hotel de Pekin and has 200 soldiers actively guarding his apartments.

Train Waits for This Passenger

Millers Falls, July 9—A passenger boarded one of the Central Vermont electric trains bound for Keene, N. H., when he discovered he had left his suitcase at home.

He related his dilemma to the conductor who obligingly pulled the cord, signalling the engineer to stop. The train halted and waited for the man to run to his home, a short distance from the station, and waited for his return.

Then the train moved on.

French to Debate U. S. Debt Thursday

Paris, July 9 (AP)—The French Cabinet today decided to open the flood gates Thursday on oratory in the Chamber of Deputies relating to the ratification of the debt accords with America and Great Britain. Premier Poincare himself will be the first speaker. He indicated it probably would take him the entire first day to review the situation for the Chamber, which will be asked tonight to leave Thursday and the succeeding days of its calendar for the debt discussions. MISHAPS DON'T WORRY FLYING PUBLIC NOW

By GEORGE W. HAMBLIN

The trend of the flying public's attitude toward airplane accidents was best demonstrated when the giant Keystone Patrician, operated by Colonial Air Transport on the Boston-New York run, was forced to make a landing immediately after the take-off, and plunked into the excavation for the new Administration building at the Boston Airport.

The giant plane had just taken to the air when the port motor cut out, and Pilot Hughie Wells was faced with the necessity of a forced landing with three-quarters of the runway already covered. A horse and wagon, directly in his path, forced Wells to turn to the left and then straighten out in an effort to get back on the runway and ground-loop the big bus. He was almost successful, but the excavation was too close, and the ship dropped into it, going up on its nose and then coming down on all "fours." The 14 passengers were helped out, all uninjured, and a tri-motored Ford, also owned by Colonial, was immediately warmed up. Ten of the passengers climbed aboard with never a qualm, and the same two pilots, Wells and Wonsey, flew them to New York.

There wasn't a word of protest out of any of the 14 passengers, and they all acted as though the accident was part of the day's work.

After more than four years of labor in Boston's aviation circles, Z. D. Granville, builder of the Gee Bee sport plane, has finally seen his life-long dream come true, and is moving his plant on Orleans st., East Boston, to Springfield Airport, where he will go into production of the Gee Bee.

The Tait Brothers, of Springfield, the ice cream people, are backing Granville in his new venture. The large wooden hangar on the airport in Springfield will be used for the factory and engineering plant, and when the business expands, a larger place will be built.

A service division, similar to the plant Granville has in East Boston, will be operated along with the manufacturing plant, and a crew of experienced men will work in this department.

Granville is president and general-manager of the Granville Aircraft, Inc.; James Tait is treasurer, Harry Tait is assistant-treasurer and a director, and the aforementioned trio along with Robert Hall, are the directors of the company. Hall is also chief engineer of the new outfit. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan and Harvard. Robert G. Dexter, of M. I. T., and Robert W. Ayre, of Harvard Engineering school, comprise the engineering staff, all under Granville, of course.

Bill Blaufuss and Joe Barber returned from the air meet at Berlin, N. H., and when they climbed out the Travel Air and Challenger engined Robin, both were nonchalantly swinging canes. The canes were donated by the management of the meet, and the boys at the port had a lot of fun taking Bill and Joe for a sleigh ride.

Jack Lenox dropped in to have a bit of work done on his Challenger engined Robin, and reported that he and his stepbrother, Chappie, are flying for the H. and H. Aircraft Corp. of New Haven, Ct.

Jack says that the company has, in addition to the Robin, two Fleet training planes, two OX-5 Bird biplanes and an OX-5 Challenger biplane. Chappie does all the instructing, and is chief pilot of the company. Jack takes care of the cross-country, and is also vice-president and general manager of the outfit.

Both Lenox boys were at the White River Junction air meet and Jack walked away with the free-for-all race, beating Ryan broughams, Fairchilds and everything else. Chappie came in second in the 110-horsepower race in a Fleet, and between the two of them, they went back to New Haven with almost a thousand dollars in their jeans.

The field from which they operate is one mile from Savin Rock, right on the shore, and is triangular in shape, measuring over 2000 feet on a side.

Russell "Bud" Robertson, chief pilot at Boltz Airport, Mansfield, came to Boston in his Great Lakes training plane, and reported a race with Crocker Snow of Skyways, at the latter's field in Marston's Mills, Cape Cod. Robertson dropped into Skyways Field, and was immediately surrounded by the students there. Snow challeneged "Bud" to a race, and the latter accepted. The course was to Hyannis Airport and return, a matter of 16 miles. Robertson beat Snow, who was flying a Moth, easily, and the day was saved, as far as the little Great Lakes was concerned.

This is the first pelt Robertson has tied on his belt, and with all the meets coming off during the remainder of the summer, he is out for prizes, with a lot of the old fight.

Bay State Flying Service sold an OX-5 American Eagle to John L. Powers, taxicab owner. Powers left today aboard the train for Kansas City, Mo., the factory, and hopes to be back in Boston by the latter part of the week. Powers will use the ship for aerial taxi work, claiming to be the first taxi man in Boston to use an airplane for taxi work in conjunction with his cabs. This is the seventh airplane Fred Pereira, operations manager of Bay State, has sold this year.

Lindy Children See "Spirit of St. Louis"

By NEAL T. SCANLON
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Washington, D. C., July 9—A first hand view of the "Spirit of St. Louis," the other half of "We," now reposing in the Smithsonian Institution here, provided the big thrill for the Boston Lindbergh Club's essay winners on the first day of their Washington stay.

The mighty plane, suspended from the rafters in the main hall of the Smithsonian Building, held the club members spellbound as they inspected it.

The plane was but one of many wonders seen during a full day's sight-seeing tour. The treasures in the Smithsonian Institution and the National Museum were pointed out to the children.

They saw the plaster reproduction of the heroic figure that crowns the Capitol Dome. They saw tattered battleflags and faded uniforms worn by our nation's heroes. They circled the Washington monument overlooking the city. Then the huge bus carried them to the Capitol, where the boys were permitted to sit in the President's chair, while the girls told them it just fit.

Through the Rotunda with its magnificent paintings depicting early scenes in America, the party went to the National Statuary Hall, where the states have placed statues of their distinguished sons. Representing the best in Massachusetts are Samuel Adams and John Winthrop.

The 12 children then went into the Senate Chamber, and the House of Representatives. Then another short drive down Pennsylvania ave. and they were at the White House. In the President's home they saw the great hall where diplomatic and state functions take place. They walked in the very places once trod by Lincoln, Roosevelt and Wilson.

A short trip to the Bureau of Printing and Engraving concluded the morning trip. They hurried back to the hotel, had lunch, rested a little and were ready for a visit to the Arlington Cemetery.

Through the business district of Washington the bus took them and onto 16th st., where they saw all the foreign legations and embassies.

A short ride through the National Zoological Gardens and they were in Georgetown. The quaint suburb has changed little in 100 years. The same narrow streets and quaint homes are standing. The club members saw the second White House—a little yellow shack on Main st., where Washington and Maj. l'Enfant planned the city of Washington.

Then across the Potomac, and they were in Virginia, a short ride brought the party to Arlington Cemetery where they left the bus.

The splendor of the cemetery impressed everyone—60,000 graves of men who had died in the service of their country. They saw the fighting mast of the U. S. S. Maine, and clustered at its base the graves of those who died when she went down in Havana Harbor. They saw the home where Gen. Robert E. Lee decided to side with his native Virginia rather than with the Union in the Civil War.

The climax came when the Arlington Memorial Amphitheater appeared on the top of a neighboring hill. They took pictures of the sentry keeping perpetual guard above the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

A short run back to Washington, and in Potomac Park the party visited the great Lincoln Memorial. Built of solid marble the edifice houses a figure of Lincoln.

The club members were pretty tired after the all-day journey and so when they got back to the hotel their only thought was of dinner and bed.

Lindy Hats Popular With Children

The aviation cloth hats, which the Boston American Lindbergh Club is giving to children whose names are published in the Boston Evening American, have proved popular among the members of the club.

Everywhere one finds a youngster wearing one of the "helmets." The Lindbergh Club still has a big supply of the hats and the offer still holds good.

Here's another list of boys and girls. If your name is here write to the Lindbergh Club and you will receive a Lindy aviation cloth hat free. Each day a list of names will appear in the Boston Evening American. Watch for your name.

ALBANIANS END SESSIONS

The annual convention of the Albanian Orthodox Church of North America ended in St. George's Church, Emerald st., with Kristo Kirka, one time Albanian consul in New York, presiding. The colonies represented in the synod were Boston, Worcester, Natick, Southbridge, Framingham, Jamestown, N. Y., Philadelphia, Detroit and St. Louis.

The church, in its federated form with branches throughout the United States, is headed by Bishop Fan S. Noli, a Harvard graduate, one time Prime Minister of Albania, who was overthrown by Ahmed Zogu, now King of the Albanians, in December, 1924.

Bishop Noli is now in Vienna heading the Albanian political refugees there, but according to the Very Rev. Marko J. Kondili of Philadelphia, who is in constant communication with the Albanian bishop, the bishop declared he would soon return to the United States to head the church.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: Kristo Kirka, chairman of the board; Nisi Ekonomy, treasurer; Louis Pando, Elia Michael, James Bardho, Guri Philip, Vasil Putuni, Pandi Spiro and Metro Dhosi.

Bad Check Suspect Held at Lowell

Lowell, July 9—Everett Blades, alias Ralph E. Blades, alias William Palmer, of East Woburn was held in $2000 for the grand jury when he was found probably guilty, on two counts of larceny and two counts of uttering forged instruments, in district court.

Blades is wanted in Lawrence and Nashua, N. H., on simillar charges, according to Deputy Supt. Michael Winn.

JOHN O'HIGGINS BURIED

The funeral of John B. O'Higgins, well-known Irish patriot, and for many years a resident of Boston, who died in Cork, Ireland, recently, was held this morning from the Crosby Memorial Funeral Home, 867 Beacon st.

A solemn high mass of requiem was sung at 9 o'clock at the Church of St. Andrew of the Apostles. Interment was at St. Joseph's cemetery, West Roxbury.

Singer Beats Duane

Thin, Run-down Mother Quickly Gains 5 lbs.

"I gained 5 lbs. while taking Ironized Yeast," writes Mrs. George Decker. "That means quite a bit, as my folks are both thin. What I prize most is the difference in the way I feel and the pep I have. Before I took Ironized Yeast I had to hire a girl to help me with any hard work. But now I do all my housecleaning alone."

People who had tried everything else in vain write how they gained 5 to 15 pounds in a few weeks. Skinny limbs quickly round into chubby curves. Pimply skin clears up. Tired feeling vanishes.

Only when Yeast is ironized is it more effective—for Iron is needed to bring out the weight-building and strengthening values of Yeast. Pleasant tablets. Never cause gas or bloating, safe—no harmful drugs.

Go to any druggist today and get a full size treatment of Ironized Yeast. If after this generous trial you are not delighted, get your money back, druggist or manufacturer.

Naval Reserves to Visit Portland

Portland, Me., July 9—Destroyers Hatfield, Brooks, Kane, Bruce and Lawrence will drop anchor here Friday afternoon, having on board naval reserves from Erie, Pittsburgh and Camden, N. J., on their annual summer practice cruise. Capt. Gordon W. Haines, commandant, has written this news with the request that city officials engage berths at a pier or piers. These craft will sail Monday morning.

Auto Hits Harvard Professor's Daughter

Constance Fraser, 4½, daughter of Prof. Cecil E. Fraser of Harvard University, sustained a laceration of the elbow when she was struck by an automobile driven by a Harvard summer school student in front of her parents' home, 64 Boylston st., Cambridge. She was treated at home.

The car was operated by C. Preston Vorce of Mexico, N. Y., who is living at 50 Hereford st., Back Bay. According to the police report, the child ran into the street.

Auto Strikes Cow, Driver Fined $107

Newport, Vt., July 9—Harry Wilder of Chelsea was fined in Municipal court here $107.70 for driving a car without a license. Wilder was on his way from his home to Albany on July 4 when he struck a cow in the road and his car was overturned. His wife and a Chelsea man were injured and are in the city hospital in Newport. He was uninjured. Too fast driving was given as the primary cause of the accident.

Brunswick, Me., Man Gets Bank Control

Brunswick, Me., July 9—Wilbur F. Senter, president of the Union National Bank, has completed the trade whereby he became owner of more than three-quarters of the stock of the bank by the payment of $220 per share for the stock purchased. Mr. Senter has made no statement regarding the future policy of the bank, which is the oldest financial institution in Brunswick, the first Union Bank having been organized more than 100 years ago.

Fall Two Years Ago Fatal to Man

Montpelier, Vt., July 9—Melville G. Jenne, past chancellor commander of the local lodge of Knights of Pythias, died at his home here following a protracted illness caused by a fall from the ceiling of Bethany Congregational Church, which he was redecorating following the flood of 1927. The stage in the top of the building gave way and he fell some 40 feet, breaking his back. The accident occurred last August.

HUMIDITY ENDS WORK AT ONE BIG PLANT

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Trade reviews play great stress on the weather as a governing business factor, which it obviously is in many lines. This applies particularly to seasonal lin The chartists for some time past have been preparing drawings to show connection between trade and the weather. The effect of weather on industry offers a wide field for study. The printing industry which ranks very high in Greater Boston, is affected by humidity in some lines, I am told. A big Cambridge plant on Saturday was compelled to shut down early in the forenoon, because the humidity prevented the proper flow of inks with a high glycerine content. Yesterday the humidity was also a trade factor.

Announcement of the election of J. Fletcher Farrell to the board of directors of the Merchants & Manufacturers Securities Co. is made by Arthur Greene, president. Mr. Farrell succeeds Claude C. Hopkins, who resigned. Mr. Farrell was also appointed chairman of the executive and finance committee. The new director of the Merchants & Manufacturers Securities Co. is vice-president and treasurer of the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and a director of the Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Company.

Additional business, probably to the extent of $400,000 a year, will accrue to the Bastian-Blessing Company from its new affiliation with the Federal Soda Fountain Company, of Boston, according to Lewis G. Blessing, vice-president of Bastian-Blessing. The Federal Company will handle Bastian-Blessing soda fountains and carbonators exclusively in the New England States, in which section the Bastian company was not previously represented.

The Federal Soda Fountain, of Boston, was just organized by Thacher Jenney, formerly vice-president of the American Soda Fountain Company and Arthur Balfour, formerly sales manager of the same concern. What was formerly the sales organization of the American Soda Fountain Co. now comprises the sales department of the Federal company.

The Bastian-Blessing Co. is the world's largest manufacturer of soda fountain parts and of carbonators used in the manufacture of soda water. The company also manufactures complete soda fountains, and oxy-acetylene cutting and welding apparatus. Plants are located in Grand Haven, Mich., and Chicago, Ill. The common stock of the company is listed on the Chicago Stock Exchange and traded on the New York Curb.

Through taxation, the automotive industry and its customers furnish the approximately $100,000,000 to be expended on New England roads this year. Continuance and expansion of our present prosperity depend considerably on making the flow of transportation as rapid as is consistent with safety.

Sunday's usual big traffic tieups were largely due to short-sightedness on the part of highway planners and legislators. The enormous traffic between Boston and Nantasket, for example, was handicapped by the narrow bridge at Fore River. Great sums have been expended to build a four-car-wide State highway to run into a two-car-wide bridge. The late Senator Henry Kincaide of Quincy had a plan for widening the bridge before the last legislature, when he died, the solons decided to let the matter go over "for study" another year. It is to be hoped that some of those engaged in the "study" were on hand Sunday to witness the result of the legislative decision.

The death of H. F. Straw of Manchester, N. H., removes a leading figure from the industrial circles of the Granite State. Mr Straw was one of the foremost factors in building up the great Amoskeag plant, the world's largest of its kind. He had a host of friends, and his association with Amoskeag gained the mills trade in all corners of the earth. His name will go down in history as that of one of New England's mightiest captains of industry in a day when the captain delegated comparatively few details to subordinates.

Today stocks and sports are often interlocking. The balance sheet of the Boston Professional Hockey Association, Inc., owner of the Boston Bruins, as of March 31, 1929, is of considerable interest in view of the conservative bookkeeping methods used. Total assets amounted to $371,569. Of this the association's franchise in the National Hockey League is carried at $18,030. A fair value for a franchise today is $50,000. Player investment is placed at $69,084. Yet during the past winter an offer of between $50,000 and $75,000 was made for one of the club's star players. The outstanding item in the balance sheet, however, is the amount of $30 at which the 3000 shares of common stock are carried. Early this year the stock sold at auction at $201 a share, giving the 3000 shares a valuation of $603,000. Furthermore, earnings on this issue for the year ended March 31, 1929, amounted to more than $65 a share. Cash and securities as of March 31 totaled $253,188, compared with $85,999 a year ago., while surplus account stood at $272,185, an increase of $178,568 over the March 31, 1928, figure.

C. R. Palmer has been elected president of Cluett, Peabody & Co., to succeed E. H. Betts, whose resignation was accepted. Mr. Palmer is a native of Iowa and since his graduation from college 21 years ago has risen from the ranks of Cluett, Peabody & Co., starting as salesman in the Chicago office. The company which he now heads is generally conceded to be the largest concern making collars in the world, with annual business of over $20,000,000.

London's traffic problem may be solved by a system of underground freight trains under consideration by J. H Thomas, new minister of labor, cables say. Capital of $200,000,000 would be required, and it is available immediately. It is argued the scheme would relieve unemployment dole to 60,000 men for four years, as well as remove more than 90 per cent of traffic congestion. Track would extend 75 miles from Thames river wharves to London railway stations and leading stores.

On the face of it, there appears to be no chance for solving American city traffic problems in this way.

Shell Union Oil's Increase Upheld

Stockholders of Shell Union Oil Corp. authorized the increase in capital stock by the creation of $40,000,000 of 5½ per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock of $100 par. There are at present 13,062,336 shares of no-par common stock outstanding.

The preferred stock was recently offered by a syndicate headed by Lee, Higginson & Co. for public subscription at $98 a share.

BLAUNER'S, Inc., declared dividend of 6 per cent in common stock, payable in four quarterly instalments of 1½ per cent each, the first instalment payable August 15 to stock of record August 1.

Stocks Start Fresh Boom; High Circles Less Bearish

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, July 9—A new boom has developed in the stock market. It sent average prices to record-breaking heights. Also, it has caused brokers' loans to expand faster than ever before.

B. C. Forbes

Industry, on the whole, has started the second half of the year very encouragingly, although building is an exception. Retail trade reports also are generally satisfactory, but neither uniformly so nor exceptionally so.

Perhaps most important of all, there has been a very substantial recovery in grain prices. Wheat in Chicago, instead of being below a dollar a bushel, touched $1.23 toward the close of the week.

This will interest those taking part in stock operations.

Some of our most influential bankers and other financiers who were distinctly alarmed over the speculative furore which raged earlier in the year are now much less apprehensive. They reason that the setbacks the market received were severe enough to leave it in a sounder position. They regard the recent buying of stocks as more orderly, more careful, more discriminating. They are well pleased over the vitality shown by industry and trade. Moreover, they have become less fearful concerning the danger of panicky happenings in the Wall Street money market.

Nor has the entrance of J. P. Morgan & Co. into new enterprises on a colossal scale been without sentimental effect in high places. Not only has the world's most powerful international banking house become, openly, a factor of impressive magnitude in the mighty utility field, but it has shown similar aggressiveness in acquiring control of leading food companies.

Under the conditions which have lately developed, it may well be that the upward movement in stocks will be carried further before another finger-burning relapse occurs.

It is worth noting that last week stock market history was made, not by second-rate issues, as was too often the case earlier in the year, but by such important corporations as U. S. Steel, General Electric, Westinghouse, American Telephone, duPont de Nemours, Union Pacific, Atchison, New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, Atlantic Coast Line, and Chesapeake & Ohio.

That represents very responsible sponsorship. The fact is that the Durant clique, formerly the most daring, is not less conspicuous; some of its pet issues collapsed disastrously in the last break. The market's support is analyzed by Wall Street as being now more dependable, more reassuring, more influential than before.

While utilities and individual industrials have commanded most attention, it is logical to look for a bullish movement in rails. America's railway situation is more inspiring, from the investor's viewpoint, at this moment than in 20 years. Their status has been strengthened by the highest court in the land; the Hoover administration favors consolidation and it is expected that the Interstate Commerce Commission will shortly adopt less obstructive tactics; the greatest volume of traffic in railway history is now being carried; operating efficiency has been so improved that a larger part of each incoming dollar is retained as net profit; financing by means of stock rather than burdensome bond issues has become feasible. And rails can be selected which yield a more attractive return than most of the boomed industrials or utilities.

By and by the oil division of the market will be taken in hand, but this may be some distance off.

Last week's average net gain on the New York Stock Exchange for 50 representative stocks was about 10 points. Contrasted with the low level of late March, the rise has now reached 20 points—a rather extraordinary showing.

Increase in brokers' loans look, on the surface, formidable. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York records expansion of 485,000,000 in the last three weeks. The Stock Exchange's compilation reveals the record-breaking total of 7,071,000,000 brokers' loans at the end of June, an increase of no less than $2,173,000,000, or 44 per cent, in 13 months. At New York the reserve ratio last week fell 10 per cent and for the whole system 2½ per cent. The mid-year settlement and heavy payments for stock rights were partly accountable.

The expectation is that the strain on the market will relax this month.

Call money, after touching 15 per cent, dipped to 6 per cent, and closed the week at 7 per cent. Time loans, recently at or above 9 per cent are now established at 7½ per cent. Bankers' acceptances again declined. Another gold engagement ($5,000,000) was made in London for New York.

Easier money is entirely feasible. This may keep bullish speculation going for a time.

SUN LIFE BUYS INTO TANK

New York, July 9—Officials of the General American Tank Car Corporation today confirmed the rumor that the Sun Life Assurance Company have purchased approximately 20,000 shares of the corporation's stock.

Representatives of 26 American firms will visit Soviet Russia in August under auspices of American-Russian Chamber of Commerce. Concerns represented include American Gas & Electric, Gillette Safety Razor, Remington-Rand, Chicago Pneumatic Tool, Greeneville Steel Car, Westinghouse International, American Trust Co., Equitable Trust and Chase National Bank.

A $500,000,000 merger, linking the newly-organized Continental Oil Co. and Tidewater Associated Oil Co., is being discussed. It is believed way is being paved for merger by Tidewater Associated's offer to exchange 1¾ shares of its stock for each share of Tidewater Oil common. It is understood interests identified with First National Bank of New York recently purchased large block of Tidewater Associated stock from Blair & Co., Inc.

CURB EXTENDS ITS TICKERS

New York, July 9—The New York Curb Exchange has extended its ticker service to Minneapolis, Milwaukee and St. Paul, bringing the number of cities in the system to 66. At present there are about 2500 curb exchange tickers in operation throughout the country.

Gross sales of the J. C. Penney Co. for June amounted to $17,121,067, compared with $14,129,435 in June, 1928, an increase of 21 per cent. Earl C. Sams, president, estimates that sales for the year will amount to more than $200,000,000.

Superior Oil's Production Larger

E. R. Perry, chairman of Superior Oil Corp. stated: "Production for the first six months of 1929 was 1,287,560 barrels, against 498,414 barrels in the corresponding six months of 1928.

The corporation is drilling at the present time more than 20 wells in Oklahoma and Texas. Two wells were completed as producers within the past few days."

FOREIGN FORD SOLICITATION IS ATTACKED

Reservations for securities in European subsidiaries of the Ford Motor Company are being solicited on the "when, as, and if" basis by certain self-styled brokers in New York City. Despite their representations the National Better Business Bureau, Inc., 383 Madison ave., New York, deems it highly improbable that these securities will be alloted to any of those now making this solicitation. It seems almost certain that they will be compelled to purchase the securities on the open market.

In a bulletin just being released, the National Bureau points out that solicitations for reservations are being made by letter, telephone, and telegraph. The bulletin states that investors are required to make deposits of from $3 to $7 per share. In at least one instance they are asked to pay $1 per share as a "service charge."

The bureau states that the customary charge made by brokers for the purchase of active stocks from $1 to $10 is 7½ cents per share. On inactive stocks the charge is 20 cents a share. It is evident, the bureau points out, that an explanation ois due an investor regarding the reason for an apparently excessive so-called "service charge" of $1 per share.

To date, the bulletin continues, no complete definite announcement of the financing plans of the Ford Motor subsidiaries has been made in this country. The understanding of the National Bureau is that only 40 per cent of the capital stock of these various companies will be offered to citizens of the countries in which the subsidiary Ford Company is organized and that citizens of that country will be given preference. It is possible that a small allotment of some of these stocks will be made to some United States interests if not all subscribed for in European countries, but these investment houses or banks will be of unquestioned standing.

These considerations, the bulletin points out, make it all the more necessary that an investor placing such an order on the "when, as, and if" issued basis should have a thorough understanding with the firm with which he is dealing and full knowledge of its standing and operations. Inventors, the National Bureau warns, should make certain their deposits will be returned in the event delivery of stock cannot be made and that no attempt is made to "switch" them into another security the value of which is unknown to them.

The bulletin concludes with the statement that the National Bureau and its 43 affiliated local bureaus will be glad to assist investors in ascertaining the character of the firms soliciting them for this business.

As previously explained n the Boston Evening American, the Ford shares obtainable in the United States are those traded in on the New ork Curb. These are two Canadian Ford issues and Ford, Ltd., the British company.

SIMMONS SETS NEW RECORD

Simmons Co., world's foremost manufacturer of beds, mattresses, springs, etc., has completed a very profitable and important half year. Based on present condition and outlook, increasing demand for its products, and its program for future developments, Simmons in 1929 will greatly exceed previous years in sales and earnings, and enter 1930 fortified for further important gains.

In 1928 it set records with sales of $36,599,088 and net of $4,275,370, equal to $3.88 a share on 1,110,000 shares. It placed itself in liquid condition and in excellent position for expansion during 1929. Monthly sales so far this year have increased steadily over last year. June sales to the trade, including subsidiaries 100 per cent owned, totaled $4,075,915, against $3,090,114 in June, 1928, an increase of 31.9 per cent. This brought six months sales to $23,011,935, against $17,008,629 a year ago, an increase of 35.3 per cent.

Simmons Co. reports earnings only semi-annually. In first half of 1928 profit before federal taxes was substantially bettered in six months just ended, probably by $1,000,000. As last half is normally the larger, it would not be surprising to see 1929 sales reaching $50,000,000 or more and net equalling between $6 and $7 a share. Several important sales contracts have been made this year or are under negotiation.

Chase Sets Record for Exchanges by Single Bank

It was announced today that the largest volume of exchanges ever cleared by an individual bank in the history of the New York Clearing House was recorded by the Chase National Bank on July 2 with a turnover of $815,352,462.69—approximately 30 per cent of the day's total clearings of $2,922,000,000.

CARDING and spinning departments of Exeter Manufacturing Co. will close for summer vacation July 13, resuming August 5. Bleachery and finishing rooms continue on full time.

PROFIT-TAKING APPEARS IN WALL ST.

New York, July 9 (AP)—The stock market ran into profit taking in the opening transactions today, U. S. Steel, Radio and Coty sagging one-half to three-quarters of a point, while Western Union slipped back 1⅝, and General Electric 2¼ points.

National Biscuit, however, was sent up 3½ points and May Department Stores, Safeway Stores, Allied Chemical and Michigan Steel rose a point each, the last named reaching another record price at 120½.

There was little in the overnight news to influence the price trend, but many traders seemed to feel that the technical position of the market had been weakened by recent advances, and proceeded to lighten their holdings.

Also, the rise in the call money rate to 9 per cent yesterday, while not wholly unexpected, tended to make traders rather more cautious. An increase of $221,000,000 in loans on securities by reporting Federal Reserve member banks, as shown in the condition statement as of July 3, also caused momentary uneasiness.

In sympathy with the drop in General Electric, Westinghouse Manufacturing quickly lost 2⅛ points, while Radio extended its loss to more than a point, and Bendix Aviation, International Combustion Engineering, American Power & Light and Gillette Safety Razor lost about a point each.

Operations for the advance were pushed in other sections of the list, however, particularly in the merchandising shares, which were helped by the generally favorable character of June sales reports. Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward mounted a point each in the early trading. National Bellas Hess, however, was an exception, slipping back a point.

Missouri Pacific preferred was again buoyant, rising 2 points to a new peak, and food shares received good support, Snider Packing preferred selling up 2½ points to a peak price. Goodrich, Hudson, Lambert, United Fruit, Bordens and American Bank Note were among issues mounting a point or so.

Foreign exchanges were generally steady. Sterling cables opening a shade lower at $4.85 5-16.

Electric Bond & Share sold up a point at 130⅞ on the New York Curb today. The active list was generally up at the start with some profit-taking appearing later. American Superpower sold at 54⅝, up 1. Gen. Elec. Ltd., was ¼ point higher at 12½. Elec. Bond Continental Oil rose a point above yesterday's close. A block of 15,000 shares of Marconi International changed hands at 38⅝, up ⅛.

The following additional securities have been admitted to dealing in the securities markets of the New York Produce Exchange: Cables and Wireless Ltd., 5½ per cent preference shares; 7½ per cent noncumulative A., ordinary shares B., ordinary shares, all Guaranty Trust Co. of New York and American Depositary Receipts, all on a when as and if issued basis and all with par value 1 pound sterling.

Kinner Airplane and Motor Corporation common stock warrants, Atlantic Seaboard Airways, Inc., no par common voting trust certificates, Raytheon Manufacturing Company capital stock, Chemical Bank and Trust Company $10 par capital stock; Eastern Utilities Associates common stock, no par convertible stock; no par Seaboard Fire and Marine Insurance Company, capital stock $10 par; and New Brunswick Fire Insurance Company, capital stock $10 par value.

BUSINESS PACE CONTINUES UNCHANGED

It declares business activity is marking time for the moment. Such information as is available on June statistics indicates that there was very slight change from the April-May rate.

Reports from a few of the leading automobile and truck manufacturers point to around 550,000 units as the June output. This will be a new record for the month by a considerable margin and is not much more than the usual seasonal decline from May when more than 635,000 units were produced.

A striking feature of these returns is the fact that light automobiles, represented chiefly by Ford and Chevrolet, registered no decline whatever. In fact, according to preliminary estimates, Ford output increased from roughly 200,000 in May to 215,000 in June, while Chevrolet fell off only from about 160,000 to 150,000. Thus, the total of the two remained about constant or slightly increased. There has evidently been a sharp reduction in other lines, especially in the medium and higher priced groups.

Stocks of cars in dealers' hands have accumulated rapidly since the first of the year. This increase as compared with previous years is not much greater, according to a recent survey within the industry, than the increase in sales. As compared with prospective sales for the second half year, stocks seem rather heavy as it is not likely the number of cars sold during the next six months can approach the record of the past six months and will do well to exceed the last half of 1928.

The steel industry's production ran for the first half year at the highest rate in its history, with prospects of less than seasonal decline during the coming month. Beyond the summer period the outlook is obscure. It is difficult to see where the tonnage for normal fall expansion is to come from.

Building contracts for the month of June are estimated at $546,000,000 for the thirty-seven Eastern States, which is a decline of 7 per cent from May and 19 per cent from June last year. Thus, the trend in building activity continues downward, despite the large industrial and utility projects being undertaken. A temporary check to this decline is possible if easier monetary conditions develop later in the summer, but it can hardly be said that a definite end to the decline is in prospect.

An important development of recent weeks is the change in the wheat situation. While the winter wheat crop, according to latest estimates, will be quite large, weather conditions in the Northwest and in Canada have been less favorable. Forecasts of the total American crop have been somewhat reduced and those for the Canadian output point to sharp reduction from last year. Dry weather at seeding time has also been encountered in the Argentine.

Consequently, although the carryover of old wheat is large, prospects now would seem to be for some reduction in export surpluses. If this prospect materializes, wheat prices may work somewhat higher. It is probable that during the heavy winter wheat marketing season just ahead, the tendency will be toward weakness on account of the heavy visible supplies and the large volume of this crop which is estimated at around 600,000,000 bushels. All told, there is now a fair chance that the wheat crop will return the farmer as much cash as last year, which was fairly satisfactory.

Thompson Products Earnings Larger

Net profit of Thompson Products, Inc., for five months ended May 31 is equal to $2.41 a share on 262,660 combined Class "A" and "B" shares against $1.61 a share on 248,960 combined shares in the 1928 period.

Attempt at Farm Relief by Federal Board Is Nearing

New York, July 9—Within a week the Federal Farm Board, five members of which have been selected by President Hoover, will meet and attempt to find a solution for one of the oldest of economic problems, the question of crop surpluses and their effects upon prices in the world markets.

The selection of Alexander Legge, the head of the International Harvester Corporation; Charles Teague, Carl Williams, C. B. Denman and James C. Stone, men of broad vision and recognized ability in practical farm marketing matters, has been most highly commended in all parts of the country, and it is confidently believed that men of like caliber will be selected to fill the three remaining positions on the board. Big sacrifices have been made by Mr. Legge and his associates on the board in order to demonstrate the correctness of the theory advanced by the advocates of farm-aid legislation.

Briefly, the situation is this: The American farmer raises wheat, cotton and other products in competition with the farmers of Canada, Europe and South America, all of which contribute their share to the required volume in the markets of the world. As supplies contract prices stiffen, and in years of any considerable shortage prices advance rapidly. The reverse is also true. When supplies are above requirements prices decline and their movements are formally tabulated in the grain, cotton and other exchanges in New York, London, Winnipeg, Argentine and other world centers.

The farmers' principal grievance is that a small surplus of wheat or cotton, say 5 per cent, rules prices for the whole crop, leaving entirely out of the picture the 95 per cent of the crop which is regularly consumed. Why should a 5 per cent surplus, or even a 10 per cent surplus break the price of a crop for which there is a world-wide market, says the farmer, where does the very important element of cost production come in, and how is he to be compensated for the losses forced on him when his crop sells for less than it costs to produce?

The shoemaker cannot sell shoes below cost, except under ruinous conditions forced on him by an occasional bankruptcy and the loss of all of his assets. Then the shoemaker is through, he must turn elsewhere for his livelihood and leave shoe production to his competitors. The merchant must have his profits, the broker his commission, the banker his interest, all branches of industry must exchange goods at a fair margin above production to remedy the matter, in order to keep going.

The farm board will attempt to remedy the matter, in two ways: first by helpful counsel with the farmer relative to the production of his crops and the limitation of those for which there is not adequate demand; second, by helping to scientifically market crop surpluses, where they occur, instead of permitting them to pile up in the home and foreign storehouses.

The board will buy no crops, but will have a half a billion dollars to advance to the farmers' own agencies for the purpose of marketing surpluses, where they occur, in an orderly manner.

In this way it is hoped that the tail of the agricultural surplus will not be permitted to wag the dog of world-wide market demand and consumption. Foreign buyers will be prevented from carrying through their pet schemes to depress prices for cotton and grain at the times when their own agents are in the markets for big supplies. Finally, the office of the farm board in Washington will be the recognized authority on fair prices for American wheat, rather than the Liverpool Wheat Exchange, which has for too long a period ruled the wheat markets of the world.

American wheat prices this year slumped to the lowest levels in 15 years, mostly as the result of the heavy carry-over from last year and the over-production in Canada, United States, Argentine and Australia, the four principal grain-producing countries. To facilitate the export of wheat the railroads agreed to reduce rates on the shipments of flour and grain to the Eastern seaboards, but these reductions were promptly met by similar reductions in the competing countries.

The farm board will of course be powerless to regulate conditions in the production and market of grain and cotton in the outside countries, but it is logical that agricultural interests there will be ready to cooperate in any measures affecting their common good. It is to the advantage of the Argentine wheat grower that American grain prices are maintained at profitable levels and he is not likely to flood the markets to his own detriment.

The experiment will be followed with considerable interest in all parts of the world, and already the Europeans who have commended the successful operation of the reserve banks, the world's best banking mechanism, are wagering that the farm board will with equal brilliancy solve the problem of farm surplus.

EARNINGS FOR INVESTMENT CORP. $421,942

Total earnings of Joint Investors, Inc., for the six-month period ended June 30th were $421,942, according to the semi-annual report of the company issued to its stockholders. This amount represents earnings of 41.28 per cent on the average paid-in capital, surplus and undivided profits of $1,022,091 for the period.

Of the company's total earnings, $206,905 was derived from net income, while unrealized profits in the security portfolio increased $215,037 during the six months. The total earnings indicated are equivalent to $41.27 per share of unconvertible preferred stock outstanding on June 30th. Total earnings on the Class A stock outstanding were $38.71 per share, equal to $8.24 if the conversion privilege of all outstanding preferred on June 30th had been exercised that day.

The cost of securities owned by the company on June 30th was $1,659,785. The market value of the portfolio on that date is given as $2,057,375. The investments of the company are confined to the railroad, industrial, public utility and financial fields. Nearly one-half of the company's funds are invested in industrial common stocks, one-fourth in public utility securities and the remainder in railroads and financial companies.

SHOE COMPANY PACT BY CASH AND EXCHANGE

The recent acquisition of three additional companies by the Ground Gripper Shoe Company was effected partly through cash and partly through an exchange of stock, it was announced today by Norman K. Winston, chairman of the board of directors.

Upon completion of the present consolidation and financing Ground Gripper Shoe Company will have outstanding $2,500,000 6 per cent convertible debentures, 25,000 shares of no par value preferred stock and 155,000 shares of no par common stock.

It is stated by Mr. Winston that opportunity may be given to preferred stockholders to convert their holdings into common stock. There are 1,000,000 shares of common stock authorized. The common stock is listed on the New York Curb market and Chicago Stock Exchange.

Mr. Winston stated that with the recent acquisition of the Cantilever Corporation, Crittenden Company and the William Henne Company, makers of Physical Culture Shoes, the Ground Gripper Shoe Company will be doing an annual voume of between $10,000,000 and $11,000,000 on the basis of present sales. In addition it will have the largest chain store distribution of orthopedic shoes in the world.

INFLUX OF GOLD MEANS EASE OF MONEY STRAIN

"Further imports of gold, if continued on the large scale of recent months would have an important influence in easing present stringent credit conditions, says the Midland Bank, Cleveland, in a report on the gold situation. In addition to the possibility of continued large receipts of gold, other factors making for lower money rates may become effective in the near future, the bank believes.

"The reversal of the flow of gold has been an outstanding development in the first half of 1929," says the bank. "Between the middle of 1927 and the end of 1928, this country lost $450,000,000 of gold, most of it going to Europe where it was used to stabilize currencies. While Europe was benefited, the loss of nearly half a billion of bank reserves was a powerful factor in lifting interest rates in this country.

"But toward the end of 1928, the gold outflow came to a halt. The metal began to be attracted back to this country by the magnet of high money rates. During the first six months of 1929, the net addition to the country's gold supply has been close to $200,000,000.

"The interesting part of the existing situation is that although the Federal Reserve system has so far neutralized gold imports by selling securities in the open market, its ability to do this from now on is highly questionable in view of the very low level of its security holdings at present. In the first half of 1929 the system sold nearly $500,000,000 of acceptances and government securities, which more than offset the incoming gold.

"But this selling had reduced acceptance holdings of the system to $83,000,000 at the close of June, and government securities to $150,000,000, almost at rock bottom. Moreover, we are now approaching the period when acceptances are normally bought in large volume to aid crop-moving.

"From now on, therefore, any further gold imports in substantial amount are likely to have a real influence in easing the credit situation, either through a reduction in member bank rediscounts with the system, or through providing additional reserves which may be used for credit expansion.

"Pursuing the argument further, if money rates do become easier, gold will be less likely to flow in this direction and the reserve position of some of the European central banks will thus be better protected. The gold situation as it stands, then, will bear watching, as the importance of further gold imports will be materially greater than in the past six months."

Department Store's Earnings Take Jump

Hayden Stone & Co., Trust Company of Georgia, and Jackson & Curtis financed Rich's, Inc., in April. This corporation succeeded M. Rich & Bros. Co., the largest department store in the southeastern states, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga.

Earnings for the year ended Jan. 31, 1929, were $317,286, or 5.3 times the preferred dividend requirements, and $2.82 a share on the common stock. In the quarter ended June 30, the first quarter of the new company, the earnings were 15 per cent ahead of earnings for the corresponding period a year ago of the predecessor company.

Rich's, Inc., has authorized $3,000,000 6½ per cent convertible preferred stock, and 375,000 shares of no par value common stock, of which $1,000,000 preferred and 100,000 shares of common are outstanding. At present the management is considering amalgamation with five independent department stores.

NEW USES FOR COPPER ARE STUDIED

The uses of copper and its alloys, brass and bronze, are increasing rapidly. According to the Copper and Brass Research Association, there has been a progressive annual increase in the consumption of brass pipe.

Sales of this material made a new high record in 1928 at 76,777,400 pounds, or 13,843,100 pounds more than for 1927. Compared with demand in 1922 the gain last year was 60,760,900 pounds.

The average gain in brass pipe sales has been nearly 75 per cent each year for the past six years. The gain in 1928 represented an increase of 379 per cent over 1922.

All modern buildings in American and Canadian cities are being fitted out and equipped with rust-proof materials of copper and its alloys. City water departments are using copper tubing for all connections between water mains and house piping.

Home builders and construction companies are using copper as never before. In one city of the United States there was an increase of 75 per cent in the use of copper for building purposes during the past year. It is interesting to note the increasing rate at which copper flashings, gutters, downspouts, brass pipe plumbing and solid brass and bronze hardware are coming into use

Bulls Think Reserve Will Be Lenient Until Crops Move

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 9—The approach of brokers' loans toward the March 20 peak and the establishment of new high levels for stock prices raise anew the question of the wisdom of the Federal Reserve policy of the last year and a half.

If the object of the policy was to sop the bull cycle, then it has certainly failed. But as a matter of fact spokesmen for the board have repeatedly said that the board as such had no opinion about the level of stock prices and was unconcerned with putting stock prices up or down. On the other hand, the board has repeatedly expressed a legitimate interest in the volume of credit issued for speculative purposes. The restrictive Federal Reserve policy had, broadly speaking, held down the volume of bank credit employed in speculative channels, but the additional needs of the market-place have been amply met by the availability for loans of non-banking credit. The so-called bootleg loans, coming from corporations, individuals, trustees, investment trusts and foreign agencies really constitute capital, or savings, rather than bank credit, in the opinion of some competent authorities.

To infer, because the aggregate of brokers' loans is almost back to the all-time peak of March 20, that the Federal Reserve policy has been fruitless and meaningless is hardly justified. If it had not exerted its restraining influence unbridled speculation might have gone much further. Loans might much sooner have established unprecedented summits. The influence of the Federal Reserve in its protracted struggle against the bulls has been to stabilize the market—to flatten out the peaks.

In a sense the Federal Reserve, ever since November, 1927, has been seeking to challenge the legitimacy of the rise of stock prices. The burden of proof has been with the bulls. The central banking authorities reversed their earlier credit policy and undertook to make sure that inflation of Federal Reserve funds was not the basis for the extravagant marking up of stock prices. Accordingly, the market, because it has been meeting the relentless challenge of the Federal Reserve, is perhaps on a sounder footing. The basis for the rise of stock prices is optimism concerning the longer term future of American business and enthusiasm over the record-breaking corporate earnings established thus far in 1929. Prior to 1928 a great impetus for the rise came from the easy money policy of the Federal Reserve, based on the extraordinarily large gold hoards.

The fifth peak of stock prices this year is in the making. On previous occasions, each new high level invited sufficient selling to break the rally. The restrictive credit policy was in each case a factor in halting the previous advances of the year. Students of the anatomy and physiology of market movements are already wondering when this current lift, which carried prices from the low level of the year, established during the May reaction, will end.

Seasonal factors are currently playing into the hands of the bulls. Between the present time and the crop-moving period the commercial demand for credit declines. Then later in the summer, when crops begin to move, the Federal Reserve, anxious to promote exports of farm products, will be reluctant to take steps to make money dearer. Accordingly, unless the market again runs away with itself with feverish excitement, it is unlikely to feel the full force of the opposition of the Federal Reserve until after the crop movement and the fall business expansion has been taken care of.

It remains to be seen whether the statement of Charles S. Hamlin, member of the Federal Reserve Board, before the Maine Bankers Association late last month concerning the success of Federal Reserve policy was not premature. Mr. Hamlin indicated that the credit crisis was over, and that the policy of direct dealing with recalcitrant member banks, instead of general boosts in the rediscount rate, had proved a success.

The market will meet its next test this week when and if brokers' loans rise into new high territory. The comparatively slight nervousness over the new climb of brokers' loans is predicted on the assumption of the bulls that the banking authorities will look with less disfavor on such a happening at this time when they did last winter and spring.

RAIL ISSUES SHOW LARGE INCREASE

A growing ability and desire on the part of the railroads to accomplish their financing by common stock issues is indicated by a statistical study of stock and bond offerings in recent years compiled by Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., showing that American railroads have issued more than $352,000,000 in new common stock in the last six years.

In 1923, there were three new issues of rail common stocks, valued at $6,250,000 and in 1924, four issues, valued at $33,500,000. The next year saw but one issue, of $2,000,000; but in 1926 there were three offerings, valued at more than $49,000,000. Five issues of rail commons were brought out in each of the past two years. The issues totalled $126,000,000 in 1927, and $134,750,000 in 1928.

The combined value of the 21 issues of common stock during the six years covered by the survey was slightly more than double the value of rail preferred issues during the same period.

While common and preferred stocks together account for but 14 per cent of the total rail financing, Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., point out that this proportion does not show a lack of interest on the part of the investor in rail stocks. On the contrary, the annual average of prices of 25 rails has more than doubled within the six years, showing a gain every year from 60.15 in 1923 to 126.10 in 1928.

Minneapolis Unit Closed by Childs

Minneapolis, July 9—The Childs restaurant in Minneapolis, the only one in the Twin Cities, will be closed and equipment sold. It has been operating about 15 years, but location has ceased to be desirable because center of business has shifted as the city has grown and the Childs Co. has been unable to situate more desirably.

ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT

by ERICH MARIA REMARQUE (A German Private)

The publication of "ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT" in this newspaper marks a new epoch in newspaper making. The book is one of the Six Best Sellers—not of a few months ago, but right now. It is the June selection of the Book-of-the-Month Club. It is the most vitally alive volume on the market. Every new edition is swept clean as fast as it comes from the presses.

The story, written by a common soldier who lived through the nightmare he describes, has evoked unanimous critical endorsement in Germany, Great Britain, France and America. Everyone is talking about this book—and will continue to talk about it for years to come.

Its appearance in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, starting Sunday, July 14th, and continuing daily in the Boston Evening American, marks the first time in history that a newspaper will print a novel while it is still at the peak of its sale in book form.

To secure the right to publish "ALL QUIET on the WESTERN FRONT" under these extraordinary circumstances, a sum has been paid that sets a new record. The reason will become apparent when you have read the first instalment. You will see that there never has been a story like this—there may never be another!

Smart Set Flourishes in All Its Glory at Newport Casino Opening

SARTORIALLY EFFULGENT will the smart set of New York and Newport blaze forth tonight. It is the opening of the Newport Casino Theater. The occasion will be graced by stunning debs and engaging matrons in costly gowns and furs, resplendent in a wealth of jewels. This year social interest is rife in the renovated Bijou playhouse, now ruled and motivated by William H. Vanderbilt.

HE WILL BE HOST TO THE cast of the two companies after the performance tonight, his hospitality to be revealed at Oakland Farm, his spacious estate along the highway from Middletown into Newport. Here the players will enjoy an after-theater party. He is to entertain informally before the performance, his guests to accompany him to the theater. Ever since he took up the work of the theater, where the late Moses Taylor left off, Mr. Vanderbilt has transferred to the histrionic arena of Newport his business acumen and cherished congeniality.

THOSE WHOSE NAMES spell world renown and affluence will attend the opening. Their presence will shed an aura, illustrious and distingue, over the occasion. Vanderbilts, Goelets, Loews, De Graganzas, Thayers, Whitneys, Astors, Curtis James, Auchincloss, John Nicholas Browns, all will gather tonight in the spirit of art to witness Madge Kennedy in "The Happy Husband" and furnish the eclat without which the Casino Theater season would not be set off in a blaze of triumph.

MANY ARE THE BOXHOLDERS, a list which assures that this summer's patronage will perpetuate the dignity and splendor of the past. The Oliver Gould Jennings, Mrs. William Woodard, Mrs. Henry Clews, Henry Walters, Mrs. Vanderbilt (dowager), the James Stewart Cushmans, Maxim Koroliks, Mrs. T. Shaw Safe, Mrs. Moses Taylor are to hold box parties, I find. Then there are the Wetmores, Edith and Maude, Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, Perry Belmonts, Alice Brayton, the E. S. McLeans, the Halsey de Wolfs, the Rutledge Prestons, Hamilton McKown Twombleys, Rosalie Sprang and the Gredby Loews, who will occupy boxes. Mrs. Taylor is vice-president of the theater, while Lillian Barret is secretary.

ON THE SUBSCRIPTION registry I find the name of the Vincent Astors, Hamilton Webster, Muriel Vanderbilt Church, Forsythe Wicks, William F. Whitehouse, Paul Tuckerman, Woodbury Blair, Edson Bradley, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Harold Brown, Beverly Corbin, Clarence Dolan, Anthony Drexell Biddles, Stuart Duncan, Mrs. Elisha Dyer, Hayward Terry, Walter Bruce How, Charles Pierpont Gilbert, the William Glynns, Kenneth Budd, Mrs. William R. Hunter, Greenville Kane, Mrs. George Gordon King, Mrs. Louis Loullard, De Forest Manice, Bradford Norman, the John Russell Popes, Robert Potter, Mrs. Duncan Cameron, Mrs. James Andrews Swan, Le Roy Jones, Miss Fanny Johnson, Charles Hillhouse and many, many more. Nobility, too, will be on hand. I understand reservations for the Count and Countess Laszlo Szechenyi have been made.

Virginia Ayers, who is to be a September bride, has left with her mother for Connecticut where they are to visit for a few days.

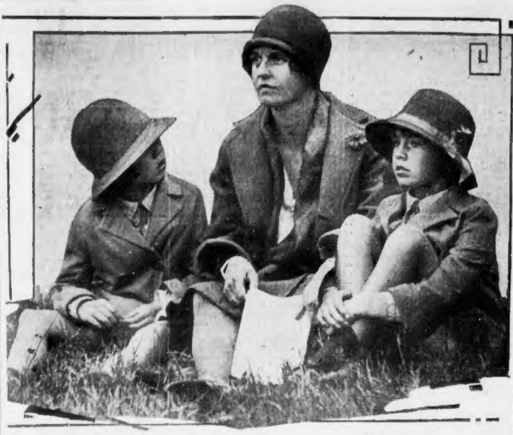
MRS. ROBERT LIVERMORE sailed with her two daughters, Cecily and Gwendolen, for a two months' tour of the continent. Robert, Jr., who went across earlier with a contingent of Harvard students, will meet his mother somewhere in Europe, to return with her and his sisters on September 11. Miss Cecily is to make her debut this winter in Boston from the Pinckney st. residence of her parents, and while nothing definite in the way of bow dates has been set, Mrs. Livermore will have something to give out when she returns from over the water. A Parisian wardrobe for the young lady, I daresay, is but one reason for the trip, as it comes to me that pretty Cecily's introductory bows are to be lavish. In the interim, Boxfields, the Livermore summer home at Topsfield, is in the safekeeping of Mr. Livermore, who plans to keep it open during the season.

CAPE COD WAY WILL SOCIETY head their motors on Thursday to exemplify the interest in the Farm and Garden Shop in Newbury st. by attending the sale for which Mrs. George D. Parker is opening her estate. Mrs. Horace Frazer, who holds sway over the function, is to be assisted by her two charming daughters, Marion and Eleanor, together with Dorothy Blodgett. Other smart matrons who will assist, I find, are Mrs. Charles R. Adams, Mrs. Andrew Adie, Mrs. Charles M. Hammond, Mrs. Walter C. Baylies, Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell, Mrs. Rene E. Baine and Mrs. A. Felix du Pont.

A FALL WEDDING WILL CLIMAX the romance of Julia Overing Blake and E. Mauran Beals, whose betrothal was announced by Mrs. George Baty Blake of Brookline from her summer home, Pine Needles, in Lenox. Young Beals is the son of the Edward M. Beals of Boston and Nahant. In the 1925 social season Miss Julia made her bows. Her debut was brilliant, for not only were her fraternal affiliations with the Junior League but with the Vincent Club as well. About a year ago tragedy entered the Blake home, when the debutante's father died. Mr. Beals is a Harvard man. There has been no definite date for the ceremony.

Betty Alden



Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., with her two daughters, Nancy and Cynthia, was an eager spectator at the Hamilton horse show, for which society turned out in large numbers.

Garment Workers to Aid Strikers

A joint meeting of the Boston Joint Board and the executive boards of the local unions affiliated with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Unions, will be held tonight to discuss plans for assisting the workers in New York who are on strike.

An open mass meeting for workers in the garment industry will be held at Wells Memorial Hall next Thursday night, at which Julius Hockman, international vice-president, will talk.

WOMEN'S CLUBS PLAN SCHOOL PROGRAM

A school program to fit the child's ability is to be urged by the General Federation of Women's Clubs in their comprehensive outlines for the coming active club year.

The Federation's educational department has announced a program for 1929-1930 with special emphasis and stress on "curriculum objective," with the slogan "school programs fitted to the needs, capacities and interests of every child." The Massachusetts State Federation, department of education, of which Mrs. David H. Nickerson is chairman, will pursue such course and at the beginning of the school terms follow the progress of the program in the classroom.

It has been said at the General Federation meeting that "what part a child may be trained to take in community enterprises depends upon his native capacity, his educability, his interests."

Dr. Aurelia Henry Reinhardt of Mills College, Oakland, California, chairman of education for the General Federation, expresses these views:

"School children of a given chronological age differ markedly in these three respects. These differences are greater each year, especially in the upper grades, due to stricter compulsory attendance laws and the growing popularity of education.

"Education of community leaders in the amount, nature and importance of individual difference is necessary. A complete community program for differentiation of curricula should include research departments and psychological clinics. Special training for the feeble-minded blind, deaf, crippled are essential. There should be classification of each grade into ability groups with adaptation of curricular content to ability.

"There should be evolved enriched curricula for gifted children and adequate training for children with special abilities, as art and music. Trade courses are necessary. Clubwomen should work toward the adoption of a school administrative organization favorable to differentiation."

NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE

At this early date plans are being formulated for the New England conference of State Federations of Women's Clubs which is to be held at the Ocean House, Watch Hill, R. I., September 4, 5 and 6. The Rhode Island Federation will be host on this occasion.

MEXICO TO ADOPT 'COMPULSORY LABOR CODE'

Six-Day Novel of Mystery, Love in the Far Off South Seas

Mary Brandon comes to New Zealand from England as a cook in a small hotel where Jim Carlyon has lived for ten years in a state of continual drunkenness. Mary interests him; he sees she is a lady and is fascinated by her. She taunts him with his vice and his failure to go to the war and he seizes her and kisses her violently. Ashamed of himself he apologizes and is further shamed by her scorn. Sally Sargent and her daughter Joan, sheep owners, stall their car and are forced to spend the night in the Inn where Mary works. They are fascinated by her and think they have seen her before. Mrs. Sargent invites her to her home. She also tries to persuade Jim to give up drinking and sends him some books. A young rancher, Lindsey Gerrard is attentive to Joan. Sally keeps trying to place Mary.

CHAPTER 2

THE evening at Whangamata following Sally's departure had so far been uneventful to Mary Brandon. She wondered if she would again receive a visit from the drunken Englishman.

His words of the evening before—that stammering confession of some sort of effort to remain sober—had not touched her. She was not easily touched now by the protestations of men who have given a free rein to self-indulgence.

How little Jim Carlyon's half-expressed protestations had meant, she knew when Mrs. Bayliss had brought the empty whiskey bottle out to the kitchen.

"Finished the bottle since last night!" was the landlady's comment. "That's pretty good going even for a hard drinker."

Carlyon had touched no whiskey since the morning. He went straight to his room now without entering the bar. For hours he lay wide-eyed in the darkness. Realization had come to him. He knew now what had happened. He loved this woman. She was more than anything else in the world to him—more than he had ever dreamed anything in the world could be.

He opened an old copy of Browning at random, and as though in answer to his thought he read:

"You'll love me yet!—and I can tarry
Your love's protracted growing:
June reared that bunch of flowers you carry
From seeds of April's sowing

I plant a heartful now—some seed
At least is sure to strike
And yield what you'll not pluck indeed,

LONGEST AIR MAIL LINE TO START

Washington, July 9—The longest United States air mail route, the foreign air mail service skirting the west coast of South America from Cristobal, Canal Zone, to Santiago, Chile, will go into operation throughout its entire length of 3900 miles on July 16, Irving Glover, second assistant postmaster-general in charge of air mail, announced.

The service is flown by Pan-American-Grace Airways, a subsidiary of Aviation Corporation of America and the W. R. Grace Steamship interests.

The new service will provide 9½-day air mail service between New York and the Chilean capital, and 8½ days' service from Miami, the northern terminus of the Pan-American air network over the Caribbean sea and its extension into South America. Three days of the total is required from the Miami-Cristobal service and 5½ days for the Cristobal-Santiago service. A section of the South American route between Cristobal and Mollendo, Peru, has been in operation for the last two months.

The new service will be operated weekly in opposite directions, until additional funds for financing the foreign air mail services are granted by Congress. The schedule for the service in each direction as announced by the Postoffice Department calls for stops at Buenaventure, Colombia; Guayaquil, Ecuador; Lima, Peru; Arica, Chile; Chanaral, Chile, and Santiago.

Seize 624 Bottles of Ale After Chase

St. Albans, Vt., July 9—Report has been received here of the arrest by a customs patrol of Leon M. Belsky of Greenfield, Mass., after the officers said they found 624 bottles of Canadian ale in Belsky's automobile. The seizure was made late Saturday night after a 10-mile chase, which ended when Belsky's machine was wrecked near Coventry swamp.

New Air Board

Lansing, Mich., July 9—Student flyers in Michigan will have a new boss after August. Control of the 3 aviation schools and 1000 students in the state will be taken over by the new board of aeronautics. They now are under supervision of the department of public instruction.

LOSS FOR 1928 MAY MOUNT TO $200,000,000

President Has Showdown on Figures With Department Heads

Washington, July 9—A record deficit in the Postoffice Department, possibly mounting to $200,000,000, has dashed the hopes of President Hoover for tax reduction.

The President's optimism, persevering in face of steadily mounting obstacles, seemed today to be definitely without foundation, the drain on the Treasury being the greatest ever caused by the postoffice, which operates perennially at a loss.

The department's annual operating deficit has been steadily mounting for several decades, reaching a peak of $32,121,095.60 for the fiscal year 1928. So many additions have been made on the red side of the ledger for the past year that the department does not know how much it is in arrears and President Hoover nominated an expert accountant for an assistant to the Postmaster-General to bring the books up to date.

After a clean up of department personnel the President called Postmaster-General Brown and his four assistants into conference at the White House and demanded a more accurate determination of deficits.

Since the outset of the last fiscal year Congress forced settlement of retroactive back pay to railroads, an item amounting to $65,000,000, reduced mail rates and increased pay of many postal employes, particularly night workers. Losses on second-class mail have increased, with new air mail and marine mail projects piling up further losses. Third Assistant Postmaster-General Tilton, expert accountant, is trying to total and account for the greatly increased losses.

It appears that the deficit in that department alone may equal the government's surplus of $185,000,000 on June 30. It seems likely not only that tax reduction is impossible but that legislation amounting actually to tax increases through provision for increased revenue, such as an increase of mail rates, may be saddled upon the Hoover Administration.

The President has yet to determine how far the budget of each government department can be reduced, how far the increase in governmental revenue is due to "temporary stock exchange activity," and the full effect of Congressional legislation of the last 12 months, including the naval building plan, increased military aviation costs and farm relief.

UNIFORMS FOR AUTO 'SLEUTHS'

The force of inspectors employed by the Registry of Motor Vehicles will soon blossom forth in uniforms for the first time.

The new uniforms are of gray whipcord. The coats are single-breasted, four buttons, peak lapels, and patch pockets. The buttons carry the State seal. The cap is the soft top military cap with visor, and is adorned with the State seal badge.

For winter wear the inspectors will wear a forestry green overcoat, double breasted. A black four-in-hand tie and white shirt will be part of the apparel also.

The inspectors will wear their uniforms while examining all applicants for operator's licenses, and also when they are working on the highways.

Cranberry Worker Killed by Cavein

Carver, July 9—Wilson Wallace of West Wareham is dead today as a result of a cavein at a bog of the New England Cranberry Company in this town.

Wallace, with George Morse, also of West Wareham, was engaged in digging a trench for the foundation of a new building, when the earth caved in and both were caught in the landslide.

Morse was badly squeezed by the weight of the earth. He was removed to his home in West Wareham.

Wallace was about 60 years old and is survived by a widow.

TRUNK OF WIFE OF CONSUL HAS OPIUM

San Francisco, July 9—United States customs officials announced they had discovered 200 tins of opium in one of the trunks brought here by Mrs. Ying Kao, wife of the Chinese vice consul at San Francisco.

Continuing the investigation over the protests of Mrs. Kao's attorneys, Customs Agents John W. Smith and Robert Harris broke the seals which under usual procedure passed the trunks through the customs without a check by officials, and investigated the contents of the trunks which were held on arrival here from China.

In addition to the opium, the officers said they discovered hundreds of pieces of expensive silks and fine laces, upon which no duty had been paid.

Three pieces of baggage which Mrs. Kao claimed were her own personal belongings, were not searched, but were sealed awaiting word from Washington as to their disposal today.

The search, officials said, culminated a two-year investigation by Smith and special treasury agents, and was said to have some connection with the arrest and conviction of William Ross, former clerk in the Hawaiian United States Court and two wealthy Honolulu Chinese.

Homans Paid $3000 for Legislative Work

The time has expired for filing with the Secretary of State returns of legislative expenses. Among those received were the following:

Public Franchise League to Wallace H. Walker, $1961, committee of Back Bay residents to Robert Homans, $3000, Checker Taxi Company to W. Lloyd Allen, $500, Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway Company to Philip G. Carleton, $750; Massachusetts State Pharmaceutical Association to James F. Cavanagh, $500, Portia Law School to George F. James, $500.

Briand Insists on Parley in Lausanne

Paris, July 9 (AP)—Aristide Briand and German Ambassador von Hoesch conversed about a place for a conference of the nations relative to putting the Young reparations plan into effect. Briand reiterated his determination that the conference be held in a neutral city, preferably Lausanne, expressing himself as he did in a note to the British government. The German views were not made known.

The Curious Quizzer

THE QUESTION

Do you think that police, firemen or other city employes should be restrained from doing other [illegible]

WILLIAM J. INNES, South St.—No government or city employe should hold any other position than the one the State or city pays him for. It is perfectly proper for a fireman or a patrolman to take jobs at watching a store or place of business when off duty; such work is in line with his duty, and I think it all right. Painting, carpentering, plumbing and such are not in line with a policeman's or a fireman's daily duty, and should be left entirely to the regular tradesmen.

NATHAN A. TALLEN, Washington st.—Firemen and policemen should not be permitted to do outside work. It is not fair to the public nor to the men in the organized trades. City employes, however, should be taught how to make repairs, in emergency, when called upon to do something to keep the work from being delayed. Such work would be done only on the equipment used in the department the men are engaged in.

MRS. JOHN J. WALSH, Haverford st.—Firemen and policemen are well paid for the work they do. They get a good week's pay without attempting to make more by doing two men's work. There are plenty of men loafing who need the money they could make if they were given some of the work now done at fire and police stations. The best work is done by workmen who served an apprenticeship in the various trades and I think the city would be saving money by having such men do the work instead of having firemen or policemen doing it.

MRS. HUGH C. GREENE, Haverford st.—Firemen or policemen should be satisfied with the position and not keep other men from working. If men working for the city have too much time on their hands they should spend it in studying to make themselves more efficient in serving the public. Every time one of them does plumbing or some other skilled trade, he is taking the bread from some deserving man's family. No city employe should be given two jobs he expects to be paid money for [illegible].

Family Welfare Society Aids 1467

Fourteen hundred and sixty-seven families and old persons including 130 who applied during the month were assisted by the Family Welfare Society in June according to reports from the 14 districts and bureau for aged women submitted to the directors yesterday.

Factors most often responsible for new applications, in the order of their importance, were sickness, domestic difficulties, unemployment and old age.

During the month $12,441 was secured and expended for relief. It was reported that the social service exchange had been consulted 5356 times during the month.

U. S. RETURNS $590,000 TO MEXICAN

Ateca's Government Has Failed to Make Out Case Against Him, Court Hears

New York, July 9—Federal Judge Thomas D. Thatcher granted an order directing the return to Salvador Ateca of all the $770,000 in money and securities seized from him by U. S. Atty. Tuttle on March 4, with the exception of $180,000, which is to be held by the United States District Court pending the outcome of a civil action brought by a Mexican bank.

Tuttle himself applied for the order. The money is in a safe deposit vault in the Harriman National Bank at 527 Fifth ave. in Tuttle's name. He said that since the Mexican government had failed to make out an extraditable case against Ateca and his secretary, Antonio Gomez Maquero, he saw no reason why he should withhold the money from him any longer. He explained that the money had been held by him under the treaty terms with Mexico.

The Banca de la Laguna Refaccionario, of Torreon, Mexico, claims that $168,000 of the money seized from Ateca, was looted from it by Mexican robbers. It has been alleged that Ateca was paymaster for the rebel army, but that has been denied by him, as have all the other charges against him.

The Mexican bank has an action for the return of the money pending. Judge Thatcher ruled that $180,000 be held by the district court in order that interest on the $168,000, and possibly other items might be covered should the bank make good its claim.

Ateca, who is at liberty under $1,000 bail, and his secretary, whose bail is $500, still face a charge of conspiracy to effect Ateca's escape to Spain and a charge brought by the United States Government at El Paso, Tex., that they violated the President's neutrality proclamation against the shipment of arms and munitions to the Mexican rebels.

Ateca was held in the federal jail here for 60 days without bail and Maquero won his release [illegible] a few days before his employer. They were permitted their liberty when the Mexican government failed to sustain its extradition charges before Special Extradition Commissioner Francis O'Neill.

Russell B. Matthews, assistant director of immigration at El Paso, and W. H. Fryer, former assistant United States attorney in that city, were arrested with Ateca and Maquero on the conspiracy charge. Matthews was exonerated by the labor department at Washington, his bail was cancelled here and the charge against him was dismissed. Fryer is still under $2500 bail. Neither the May nor the June federal grand jury returned an indictment against any of the men.

It was explained that Matthews was accompanying Ateca under instructions from Washington, where government authorities knew Ateca was leaving the United States. It was shown also that Fryer came here with him as his attorney. In arresting the four men, however, Tuttle acted on orders from Washington and complied throughout the case with the requirements of this government and also with the terms of its treaty with Mexico.

Ateca, Maquero and Fryer are to have a hearing on the conspiracy charges on Aug 4. That hearing, it is believed, may end the case so far as New York is concerned. Ateca and Maquero are under orders, however, to appear in El Paso in October to answer there the charge of violation of the neutrality proclamation.

CALL MEXICAN CONGRESS FOR LABOR LAW

New Code Provides All Must Learn Trade; Bosses to Be Natives; Vacations With Pay

Mexico City, July 9 (AP)—President Emilio Portes Gil will issue a call immediately for a special session of the Mexican Congress for July 20 to consider the special labor code which he announced last November.

The code involves radical and drastic changes in usual present day conception of the relationship between employe and employer. Its adoption will mark one of the young revolutionary Government's greatest strides along the path designated for it by its mentors, Alvaro Obregon, Plutarco Elias Calles and President Portes Gil.

Many other measures are contemplated [illegible] probably the most [illegible] of which is a [illegible] labor. Senor Portes Gil [illegible] proposals shortly after he was [illegible] Provisional President and [illegible] Minister of the Interior in the Calles Cabinet.

Internal dissension and the spring rebellion prevented his promulgating them earlier. Now, with the country largely pacified and the religious settlement achieved it was said he might proceed with a social reform nearest to his heart.

8-HOUR DAY

The labor code proposals roughly are:

Establishment of an elaborate system of labor courts with the power to advise employers as to the conduct of the business.

Appointment of a corps of labor inspectors under government supervision.

Recognition of the right to strike, without violence. Arbitration, at first voluntary, then compulsory, would be provided.

Establishment of an eight-hour day, six-day week, with four obligatory holidays and obligatory annual vacation periods with pay.

Obligatory insurance for employes to be [illegible] by the government and maintained by assessments of [illegible] per cent against employers' salaries and [illegible] per cent of salaries paid out against employers.

ALL MUST WORK

Every able-bodied citizen must learn a trade or profession and work at it at least one year in Mexico. When the nation's interests demand, he must place himself at disposal of nation, working at least one month in post assigned by labor authorities.

Seventy per cent of workers in any factory must be Mexicans; only Spanish-speaking people will be allowed to occupy posts of managers, superintendents, doctors and foremen.

Saloons and gambling houses will be banned in labor centers.

A minimum wage would be fixed in accordance with the cost of living.

Employers would be obliged to obtain consent of labor court and then give employes one month's notice before closing their business.

ROCKEFELLER AT 90 EXPLAINS WHY HE GIVES AWAY DIMES

RECALLS WHEN LABOR GOT 10 CENTS AN HOUR

Means to Inculcate Thrift by That Reminder, He Reveals to Famous Biographer

John D. Rockefeller was 90 yesterday. The following intimate etching of the Oil King's day is contributed by John K. Winkler. Mr. Winkler has recently published a widely discussed biography of Mr. Rockefeller, titled "John D.—a Portrait in Oils."

By JOHN K. WINKLER

Copyright, 1929, by Boston Evening American and Universal Service, Inc.

Pocantico Hills, N. Y., July 9.—A shriveled yet agile little man with furrowed cheeks, thin lips and ice-blue eyes early yesterday morning sat in a tepid tub half humming hymns.

The [illegible] but [illegible] carried [illegible] of the water and [illegible] dressing closet across the [illegible] famous master's bedroom where a Swiss valet was laying out a [illegible] morning costume: gray cutaway suit, full length porous underwear, linen shirt with old fashioned studs and starched bosom and rich silken tie of dark hue.

"Onward Christian soldiers
Marching as to war
With the Cross of Jesus
Going on before."

There was emphasis and exaltation in the words.

HIS FAVORITE HYMN

John Davison Rockefeller was joyously marking up another milestone on his march to glory! For years he has hummed and recited bits of biblical lore in his morning tub, and in recent years his invariable birthday salutation to himself has been a baritone rendition of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Approving himself as a true Christian [illegible] he adopts this method each birthday morning, in celebrating his apparently limitless ability to conquer the [illegible]

What a man! What a life! What an outlook!

So far as the public was permitted to know, yesterday was just a "usual" day in the life of a world figure.

A highly intelligent Swiss, John Yordi, is Rockefeller's valet. John is now in his 11th year of service. He is a musician of remarkable ability, and once yearned to appear in concert as a violinist and pianist. He had to put his ambition behind him, but finds a certain musical sublimation in playing the great organ at Kykuit, the 3000-acre Rockefeller estate two miles north of Tarrytown.

John, then, was first today to congratulate his master upon having successfully passed two decades beyond the allotted span of man. [illegible] it is the valet's duty to fill the ample Rockefeller vest pockets each morning with [illegible] and [illegible] special [illegible] John D. slips his valet one of [illegible] as a little remembrance.

MULTIPLIES DIMES

All of his servants profit by this striking departure from 100 per cent utilitarianism on three starred days of the year in the Rockefeller household—January 1, July 8 and September 25.

January 1 is the date, 1857 the year, [illegible] young John Rockefeller [illegible] the Erie Street [illegible] a poor [illegible] in Cleveland. [illegible] 8, of course, is his birthday. September 25 (1855) the day he [illegible] as a boy of all errands in a lake front warehouse in Cleveland.

The servants all profited by the [illegible] largess. John D. also took [illegible] the [illegible] servants so-called [illegible] box [illegible] is tacked [illegible] of the [illegible] corridor traversed by John D. and his golf buddies on their way to the golf room.

The golf room lies in the cellar, and the cellar at Kykuit is three stories below the main floor of the mansion. One drops down in an electric elevator.

For instance, one old laundress has been in the family around 50 years. Each January 1, July 8 and September 25, John D. drops 50 dimes for Margaret in the Christmas box.

But, when the December period of distribution rolls around, Margaret must share her "dimes" fortune equally with the son of the [illegible] assistant gardener, who had been "in the family" only two years and doubles up in his duties caddying for Mr. Rockefeller and peeling spuds in the kitchen.

TO PROMOTE THRIFT

While we are on the subject of Rockefeller benefactions (retail) you may be interested to know why John D. fastened upon the dime as the medium of exchange between himself and the public: In John D.'s boyhood the prevailing laborer's wages were 10 cents an hour.

Recently Rockefeller told one of his grandchildren, who passed the anecdote to me:

"My idea in giving away small coins was to inculcate thought of thrift in this generation of Americans, many of whom are anything but thrifty. It seemed to me this could be done best by showing them how hard men had to work for 10 cents when I was a boy. A dime was the standard wage for [illegible]

Rockefeller is a creature of infinite suspicion. But he is also, I suspect, a man of moods.

Yesterday he was a little late [illegible] in a big leather armchair, quite a few minutes after eight, looking from a the big double window at the right of his room on the third floor of his enormous gray Georgian mansion at Pocantico.

Through the haze he peered, seeking a full view of that burst of cloud and river and hill that so fascinates him.

He loves the early morning glimpse of the Palisades and the faraway Catskills. Yesterday morning [illegible] were [illegible] few minutes [illegible] the haze would [illegible]

No matter [illegible] it was [illegible] before he [illegible] away [illegible] valet [illegible] to the breakfast floor.

EIGHT AT BREAKFAST

There were eight at breakfast, including his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr. [illegible] the latter [illegible] He throws his arms about his father and kisses him [illegible] cheeks on July 8 morning. They see a great deal in each other, this father and [illegible]

In lieu of formal grace over food, John D. begins and ends breakfast with brief religious exercises. For several years the meal has begun with a daily excursion into prayer and devotion by the Rev. D. Jowett, formerly pastor of the Fifth Ave. Presbyterian Church.

Helps Himself

Celebrating his 90th birthday, John D. Rockefeller sliced himself a piece of the cake prepared for the occasion with as much eagerness as a youngster. The world's richest man observed his birthday in his home at Pocantico Hills, New York.

NEW AIR-RAIL LINE FROM N. Y. TO MEXICO

International Service to Cut Time of the Trip From Five Days to Two

Mexico City, July 9 (AP)—The Mexican Aviation Company today announced plans for the establishment next week of an international train-plane passenger service—the first to connect two nations—which will link Mexico City and New York with two day transportation.

The fastest trains now require nearly five days for the trip, while the boats require more than a week. About 1400 miles of the approximately 2200-mile journey will be made by plane, with two all-night stretches by train.

Leaving New York at night passengers will go by train to Greensboro, N. C., and transfer to a plane which will fly to Houston, Tex., and complete the first day's journey. Over-night the passengers will travel by train to Brownsville, on the [illegible] where they will [illegible] a plane arriving in Mexico City at 2 p. m. On the second day after leaving New York, returning passengers will leave Mexico City at 7.45 a. m., arriving at Brownsville at 1 p. m.

They will spend eight hours there and go to Houston that night by train, flying the next day to Greensboro, N. C., from there they will travel by train, arriving in New York at 9.53 on the second morning after their departure.

The announcement said tri-motor planes would be used throughout. The Mexican Aviation Company will operate the planes on the Mexican end of the trip, while the Greensboro and Houston hop will be made by southern air transport [illegible]. It was understood the Missouri Pacific and the Seaboard Air Line would be the railroads participating.

First Skirmish Expected at Hearing on July 24

Washington, July 9—Legal staffs of the most powerful railroad systems of the East are grooming for what promises to be one of the greatest railroad battles in history when the plan for the consolidation program made mandatory by Congress is presented. The first skirmish is expected July 24 when hearings will open on the application of the Baltimore & Ohio to secure the Rochester & Pittsburgh, one of the lines sought by the former.

That the Interstate Commerce Commission will be prepared to oppose the rail interests is evidenced by the aggressive manner in which it has turned to the troublesome problem. Members of the commission expressed the opinion it would be three years before the consolidation would be effected.

The I. C. C. has been letting the consolidation program slide along for the past few years, in the meantime asking Congress to relieve it of the problem, but it is now determined to take up the matter and carry it through to completion.

One report current in the Capital is that the members of the commission will listen to the arguments of the major rail systems for their proposed lines and then work out a plan of their own, based on the transportation needs rather than what the rail executives want. It is generally admitted that the members of the commission have been greatly displeased at the inability of the executives to work out a program voluntarily, and the commission is taking this as an indication that they, the executives, will be unable to reach any agreement.

At the same time it is known that the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission and rail executives are hopeful that Congress will take up the problem at the approaching session and lend some assistance. One Congressional proposal, the Parker bill, would make the terms for consolidation attractive so that the rail owners might be able to agree themselves. This legislation also has the support of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mayor Vetoes New Jail in Westfield

Westfield, Mass., July 9—A plan proposed by the City Council, to remove the lockup from the basement of the City Hall and into a building owned by the U. S. Whip Company, on Maine st., adjacent to the district court quarters in that structure, was vetoed by mayor L. L. Keefe in a communication to the council. Quarters could be leased for $200 a month.

The present quarters which have been in use for many years, have been condemned by the board of health as unfit for human habitation.

Several Portland Firemen Injured

Portland, Me., July 9—Captain Charles H. Mayberry of Ladder 5 was overcome by heat and smoke, Private Joseph H. Martelle of Chemical 1 suffered internal injuries in a fall, and several other firemen were burned and bruised when the fiercest blaze in this city for many months destroyed two storehouses on Somerset st., with a loss of more than $25,000.

The fire started in a large storehouse owned by Kerr & Houston and spread to a smaller structure occupied by the Smalley Supply Company.

Divorce Follows Heart Balm Verdict

Springfield, July 7—In a decree signed by Judge Charles L. Long in Probate Court, Samuel Bergman, who recently won a $5000 verdict in Superior Court against William Cable of Provincetown for alienation by the latter of the affections of Bergman's wife, was granted a divorce from her.

The couple was married in 1916 and resided in this city and Huntington, the marriage taking place after Bergman's return with the United States troops from the Mexican campaign.

The court refused to grant a decree of custody of the two minor children to Bergman, however, but will allow him to care for them.

Actor Heath to Get the Profits From $500,000 Estate

Miami, Fla., July 9 (AP)—Thomas K. Heath, now of the blackface comedian team of McIntyre and Heath and familiar figure of American stages since 1874, will receive income from a $500,000 estate for life and such part of the principal as he needs during his lifetime, under the will of his wife.

At his death, if in the meantime he has not disposed of the estate, it is to go to the Actors Fund of America for the relief of indigent actors and actresses.

Culver Honored on Manchester Visit

Manchester, N. H., July 9—Harry H. Culver of California, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, was extended a welcome to Manchester when he arrived at the local airport and was a guest at the club links this afternoon.

Culver addressed a meeting of the Manchester Real Estate Board at the Carpenter on "Aviation and Its Relation to Real Estate."

Culver and his pilot, J. B. Dickinson, and W. F. Adams, proprietor of the Tarleton Club at Lake Tarleton, flew to Manchester from Pike in 40 minutes, averaging 120 miles an hour.

ATTACKS LAWS THAT CURB LIBERTY

Medical Head Asserts Majorities Often Exceed Proper Limits

Portland, Ore., July 9—An attack on what he termed the over-regulation of human life by national legislation of restricting drink, dress and religion was made by Dr. William S. Thayer of Baltimore, president of the American Medical Association in his address opening the annual convention of the organization here. He said:

"There are lengths beyond which a majority may not go. This is no longer Republican government—it is tyranny. For immediate concentrated mass action in time of war, such government is necessary. We accept it; we demand it, but in time of peace, we insist on certain local and individual liberties which we regard as rights.

"The Congress of the United States is not made up of men who desire to establish a tyranny, but in certain ways, against the warnings of wise and temperate men, they have passed laws that may justly be regarded as tyrannical.

"As a nation we have of recent years set a rather sorry example in the passage of ill-considered and intolerant prescriptions and prohibitions which, when applied to the country at large, interfere with personal liberty."

Concluding his address, Dr. Thayer said: "When in a country like ours, the national government attempts to legislate for the whole country as to what we may or may not eat or drink, as to how we may dress, as to our religious beliefs or as to what we may or may not read, this is to interfere with the rights which are sacred to every English speaking man."

A resolution growing out of Dr. Thayer's address is expected to be considered.

A plea for medical centers owned and operated by local medical societies where persons of moderate means would receive medical aid at a cost in keeping with their ability to pay was made by Dr. M. L. Harris of Chicago, president-elect, in addressing the convention. The proposed centers, he explained, should be in the nature of pay clinics, owned and controlled by the profession and should include hospitals as a part of the general organization.

OFFICIALS ARE ALARMED AT PLAN

Old School of Thought Warns Recognition Will Aid Foes of Government

Washington, July 9 — President Hoover's intimations to the delegation of American business men who will visit Russia this summer that this government may give reconsideration to the question of Russian recognition has started an immediate backfire, especially from State Department subordinate officials.

Scores of under officials in the State and Commerce Departments echo the same opinions, which may be summed up as follows:

That the Soviet, through connection with the Communist International, seeks to bring about world revolution and the overthrow of all governments and that recognition would open the doors to revolutionary agents, would cause industrial strikes and other disturbances by spreading "subversive" propaganda; that there is nothing to gain by recognition, as trade [illegible] sians cannot be trusted and will [illegible] must be carried on upon a cash basis, that until the Soviet government agrees in advance to pay the Czarist debts to the United States and to settle all individual claims, the United States should not even discuss recognition.

These will be recognized as the major premises of the original Hughes and Kellogg policies toward Russia. They, however, were confident that the Soviet regime would not last.

The anti-recognition group predicts that Hoover and the new Secretary of State will adhere to the same major premises, but is somewhat alarmed over the possibility that perhaps they will not. Their fear is that the desire of big business and banking interests for normal diplomatic relations for establishment of long-term credits and for keeping pace with other nations, including England, in exploiting the Russian field, may upset their school of thought.

Aside from Standard Oil, Radio Corp., General Electric and other large concerns now doing business with Russia, Henry Ford is supplying $30,000,000 of automobile parts on a four-year contract. The International Harvester and John Deere Co. have contracted to supply 5900 and 800 tractors, respectively. The DuPont interests are erecting fertilizer plants in Russia and many engineering interests are engaged in hydro-electric and other developments.

The American business delegation which is to spend four weeks touring Russia this summer, leaving Berlin on Aug. 15, is composed of 80 prominent business and banking representatives. The British recently sent a similar trade delegation which strongly urged recognition as an essential to British capture of the undeveloped Russian market.

The American delegation expects to report its own findings to administration officials and is making the tour with the understanding that Mr. Hoover is willing to reconsider the question in the light of their report and recommendations. Meanwhile antirecognition officials are hopeful of counteracting any modification of the old policy of flat refusal to deal with the Soviet.

Porter Links Valet in Tom Mix Theft

Portsmouth, N. H., July 9—Russell Everett, colored porter, who is being held under bonds of $10,000 in connection with robbery of Tom Mix here during the stay of a wild west circus last month, has in an affidavit accused Cai Frydendahl, former valet of the screen star, as the instigator of the plot.

Everett is being held in the Rockingham County jail here to await arraignment before the grand jury next October. There has been no attempt to re-arrest Frydendahl.

Salesman Wins in Suit for $44,850

The F. H. Roberts Company, Boston candy manufacturers, will have to pay their former salesman, J. Ralph Kirkley of Pittsburgh, the verdicts of $39,745 and $5105.51 which two Suffolk County juries awarded him. He entered into a contract with the concern in 1905 by which he was to receive 10 per cent commission as long as he diligently and faithfully did his work.

On Aug. 9, 1923, he was discharged.

FLEES AS BABY IS BORN

New Bedford, July 9—John C. Byk, 31 Rodney st., was being sought by police here as being one of the men who were responsible for the injuries suffered by Lillian Lafreniere, 18, of 7 Bentley st., who is at St. Luke's Hospital after jumping from an automobile at Hathaway rd. and Rockdale ave., with her sister, Annette, 20.

Police say that Byk is supposed to be the owner of the car from which the girls jumped after a battle with two men. Detectives Reedy and Downey visited the home of Byk but were unable to find him. On another visit it was said he was en route to the central station to converse with the inspectors. They hurried back to their office, but Byk has yet failed to put in an appearance.

While police are combing the city for Byk, his wife, Mary, lies on a cot at St. Luke's after giving birth to a baby. His wife asked for him, but he didn't arrive.

Slain Oxford Man to Be Buried in Vermont

Worcester, July 9—The funeral of Levi N. Allen, of Oxford, who was murdered Saturday in Clermont, Fla., will be conducted Thursday from his home in Oxford, according to his widow, Mrs. Gertrude Allen. The body is now enroute. Burial will be Friday in his boyhood home town, Cavendish, Vt. Mrs. Allen says she knows nothing about the funeral plans for Angie Newton Gillis, who was murdered at the same time as Mr. Allen. She said Mrs. Gillis, formerly of Worcester, rented a gas station in Clermont from Mr. Allen, and that both were apparently murdered by robbers, who used a hammer.

Judge Blames 'Pique' for Rust Will Fight

"Pique and frayed-out nerves" caused Mrs. Florence D. Rust to object to the appointment of her son and two other business men as executors and trustees of the $3,000,000 estate of her late husband, Paul D. Rust, Boston timber magnate, according to Judge Prest of the Suffolk Probate Court.

The judge allowed Rust's will, and confirmed the appointment of Paul D. Rust, Jr., Frank H. Drummond and Paul M. Beech as executors.

"It appears that the inception of the Rust fortune was largely due to the wisdom and sagacity of Drummond, who is still mentally alert and physically vigorous," said the court. "I think he should be appointed."

Judge Prest commented upon the fact that Drummond is subject to certain claims by the Rust estate. He said:

"If he does not treat his debt as an asset of the estate and have the matter adjudicated in his account, then any interested party can petition for his removal."

Of Mrs. Rust's objections, Judge Prest said:

"I do not think they are of sufficient weight to prevent the appointment of her son and Mr. Beech. Her point of view and conduct toward them and her appearance and attitude in court, together with the evidence, warrant the belief that her objections are due to pique and frayed-out nerves."

MOVE TO OUST GOV. KOHLER

Madison, Wis., July 9 (AP)—Papers in a civil action seeking to oust Governor Walter J. Kohler from office for alleged violation of the corrupt practice act, have been served on the Governor.

Four progressives charge Kohler with having spent more than $100,000 to obtain the Republican nomination and election. They are Philip F. LaFollette, brother of Senator Robert M. LaFollette; William T. Evjue, editor of the Madison Capital Times; Alvin C. Reis, progressive floor leader of the assembly, and State Senator Glenn D. Roberts, Madison.

The limit allowed under the corrupt practices act for campaign expenses for a gubernatorial candidate is $4000. The Governor issued a statement in which he said:

"The people of Wisconsin know that my record is clear, and I do not intend to allow this move of my political opponents to interfere with the official business of the State."

HERO MAY GET 50-CENT RAISE

Thomas H. Nicholson of Dorchester, who saved two boys from drowning, may get his 50-cent increase in pay as a park department laborer after all.

Although the Civil Service Commission denied Mayor Nichols' request that Nicholson be promoted to the position of assistant gardener in recognition of his heroism, Commissioner Elliot H. Goodwin said today he had the matter "under advisement" and that the mayor had not notified him that Nicholson had been awarded a medal for saving lives.

"It was purely a routine matter," said Goodwin. "The mayor said nothing about the man's bravery and we knew nothing about it until we read of the controversy in the papers. [illegible] is a [illegible] man and the post of assistant gardener is not in the line of his advancement. However, I have the matter under advisement."

GRILL SON AND EX-HUSBAND OF SLAIN WOMAN

Haverhill Man Tells of Seeing His Former Wife Last at Christmas in Salem, N. H.

Portland, Me., July 9—George Warren Stilkey of Haverhill, Mass., divorced husband of Mrs. Delphine Stilkey, and their son Robert T. Stilkey, local teaming contractor, were grilled by police today in connection with the mysterious slaying of the 64-year-old woman July 4.

The former husband was brought to this city early this morning by Inspector Albert [illegible] Thompson from Haverhill, where he reported to the police on learning that he was [illegible]. He was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Edith M. Bowie of Salem, N. H.

Stilkey said he had been visiting friends in a camp at Ogunquit over the week-end and learned of the slaying only when his daughter telephoned him. He last saw his wife on Christmas Day, he said, at the home of Mrs. Bowie.

According to the police, Mrs. Stilkey's [illegible] was made out in the name of her son Robert, who is said to be in financial difficulties. He once had the city ash [illegible] contract in Portland for [illegible]

Sonnenberg and Lewis in Title Bout

SPORTS By NICK FLATLEY

Class and Dignity In Mat Title Go
Sonny Made Wrestling
Zeramby Is There
Chance for Indrisano
It's Hornsby Again

THIS SHAPES LIKE REAL TITLE AFFAIR

GUS SONNENBERG defends his wrestling title this evening. He swaps hugs with Strangler Lewis, from whom he butted the lucrative crown early last winter. This wrangle will establish new box office figures for Boston sports. The gate will be bigger than anything the promoters previously have been able to entice into any local arena.

This show will draw at least a hundred grand, as the boys say, when they mean $100,000. It will convince all the quick money birds that Boston is one of the soft spots. There will be a million propositions, more or less, in the next few weeks for all kinds of affairs in these parts

But apart from the money side, it will be quite an occasion. There have been some harsh things said about wrestling not so long since. So this title go has been wrapped in all the habiliments of class. A referee—a standout in the racket—has been imported. Members of all the wrestling and boxing commissions this side of Timbuctoo have been invited, and most of them have accepted.

It would seem that all possible chance of a "frame," or a claim of the same, has been eliminated

Sonny Has Made Game

Gus Sonnenberg has made wrestling a big business. In a short year, he changed it from a lowly and scoffed at secondary sport to a major league ball park proposition. The fact that this bout will gather more dollars than all the championship fights or things of the sort, put on here before, proves the contention

Gus, a Dartmouth grad, and a football hero, attracted the college interest to grappling The Green alumni, an effervescent and enthusiastic bunch anyhow adopted Gus when he decided to make more name and fame at wrestling They organized cheering sections They howled as wildly when he shuffled through the ropes in his Hanoverian green bathrobe, as they did in the fall when their football team came trotting from under a stand somewhere

The cheering section had to park in the front rows—the expensive seats. The enthusiasm was contagious. Wrestling became a big sport. All of which may sadden the soul of the real lover of learning. But the average college man would rather see a Mahan or a Grange run through a broken field than watch a million beetle browed youths have P. B. K. medals pinned on their academic chests And he loves that flying tackle.

Sonny proves that a college education means a lot in this world if you know how to use it.

Zeramby Has Arrived

Jake Zeramby, youth of 19 who wears the mournful visage of a Greek tragic poet, has arrived. Jake, who has been fighting about a year, is now very close to the top of the junior lightweight pack Any kid who licks a champion is made in the ring, until such time as he's knocked loose from consciousness by the next sensation to appear.

Zeramby, who might be called a novice, polished off one of the toughest of all the little fellows. The kid went through a rough [illegible] war, and was looking for more when the last bell rang He showed beyond doubt that he can take it. And what's more, that he is smart

His courage has made him a hero. Brains mean little to the mob. Young Mister Zeramby has rocketed into one of those rare early spots, a la Schmeling and Sharkey. He will do very well by himself, financially and otherwise, if he's properly steered from here in. And he gives Boston ring fans something to cheer about They need that since Mello and Finnegan have [illegible]

Indrisano Has Chance

Another native youth with a real chance is Johnny Indrisano, who has come back to the wars by knocking out two enemies. Johnny shot into the picture with plenty of dazzle not so long ago. He won half a dozen tough fights in jig time, and wound up by beating Dundee, a job for any warrior

Then, getting smacked with his mouth open, he suffered a broken jaw He was tagged another of those broken ring bubbles He was cast astray, so to speak. But he thought he could fight, and he kept training. His chewing machinery mended, and he got himself a manager. He looks as great a threat now as ever he did before he was flattened

The boys who released him already are bidding to get him back

Hornsby After Lead

Rogers Hornsby, who fell into something like disrepute in these parts a year ago, is a hero once more. Rogers is out to lead the National League batters again He is up with the leaders now, and unless he goes blind shortly, will soon be showing the way.

This husky athlete has proved beyond cavil that he's one of the greatest of all hitters. He has been 14 years in the big show, yet his eye is as keen, and his swing as powerful as any similar qualifications the young stars bring along.

Hornsby shows the benefits of self confidence. He thinks he can hit any pitcher He doesn't believe that the years dim the eye, or remove the snap And now he proves it. A real veteran, he poles them as far as anybody except Ruth, and as often as anybody that ever lived.

Rogers led the National League in hitting last year. He's on the way for another crown. Grabbing laurels in his 14th and 15th campaigns will be quite a stunt; will give the rest of the glory chasers something to swing at. And he cost the Cards $500 How that makes the magnates moan in these days of $100,000 rookies.

MANY WILL TRY CHANNEL SWIM

By BERENICE and PHYLLIS ZITENFIELD.

Dover, July 9 (Special cable.)—Channel swimmers—or, rather, would-be Channel swimmers—are descending on this place in droves. There are men and women in the group—veterans and novices. And they all are anxious to take a crack at the big arm of water separating England from France

David Brockman, famous Channel pilot and boatman, is the man who is going to guide us to Gris Nez, France.

"They come down here in boats at the first spell of fine weather," he told our trainer, "but [illegible] Zitenfield twins seem to be [illegible] only ones who have it in them."

GARDEN MAY BUY OUT FUGAZY

New York, July 9—Alarmed by reports that Max Schmeling will return to Germany before he will be forced into a match with Phil Scott, Madison Square Garden leaders have decided that a compromise is in order.

Negotiations are now under way to buy of Humbert J. Fugazy, the promoter of the Schmeling-Scott fight, Fugazy himself declared

The little man from Brooklyn said he has been given to understand that he can get $20,000 if he will agree to waive his rights to Schmeling's services.

When it was suggested that $20,000 was more than he had cleared on any show he staged last year, Fugazy responded that he wouldn't back down on Schmeling for $1,000,000.

STRANGLER SHOWS HOW AND WHY

HEYDLER WILL QUIZ REDS

New York, July 9 (AP)—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, was prepared today to cross-examine the first witnesses to be interrogated regarding an altercation between Chicago and Cincinnati baseball players in a Chicago railway station Some time today he said he would question members of the Reds as to their impressions of a fight between Outfielder Hack Wilson of the Chicago Cubs and Pitcher Pete Donohue on the evening of July 4.

Reported eye-witnesses to the encounter include Jakie May, Eppa Rixey, Adolfo Luque and Ray Kolp and probably all will be questioned as well as the victim, Donohue, who is said to have taken a short count after being floored by Wilson.

Tomorrow the Cubs come to New York to engage the Giants and during their stay Wilson and any of his teammates who saw the brief row will be called before the league president for questioning.

Wilson and Other Cubs Summoned by Heydler

The pugilistic Hack Wilson, Claude Jonnard, Hazen Cuyler and several of the Cub athletes have been ordered by wire to appear before President Heydler tomorrow morning. The Cubs leave for New York tonight

ST. AMBROSE and the Neponset Wanderers will face off in the opening game of the Dorchester Twilight League tonight at Dorchester Town Field.

Bert Lindvall will be on the mound for the Neponsets and Baker behind the bat. Chet Hill, the first sacker for Neponset has been playing a whale of a game and is hitting up around the .500 mark.

Butler also has been going good for the avenue club in the hot corner, and has been another big factor in the hitting department. "Bob" Kincaid gives fair promise of being one of the best gardeners in the new circuit. His work in the center station has saved many ball games for the visitors

HERB SOUSA, diminutive moundsman of the St. Ambrose club, has drawn the assignment for the first game, with Cheverie as a possible alternate.

Sonny Needs Bodyguard —Londos

THE following telegram from Jim Londos to Paul Bowser speaks for itself:

Three policemen are not enough to protect Sonnenberg. He needs a regiment. I will post forfeit to wrestle either one or all three bodyguards you mention, provided you first obey the orders of the athletic commission to put Sonnenberg or the winner of the pending Boston championship match on with me. As recognized world heavyweight champion, am ready to defend my title against challengers who are in good standing and deemed worthy to wrestling patrons, promoters and commissions.

JIM LONDOS,
Heavyweight Champion Wrestler of the World.

Illinois Athletic Commission, will be at the ringside. The Illinois Commission led the fight to force Sonnenberg to end his barnstorming tour and tackle Lewis.

SONNENBERG came to Boston from his camp at Ferncroft Inn today The champion is in the best possible physical condition and confident he will successfully defend his championship tonight

"I have put on weight and am as strong as a lion," said Sonny. "Three weeks of training have made me fit for my clash with the challenger. I licked Lewis fairly at the Boston Garden last January, and will do so again tonight."

Sonnenberg will weigh 210 pounds when he enters the ring. This weight will find him at his best.

LEWIS will be around 230 pounds when he steps into action. This will be five pounds below the notch he was at when he lost his title to Sonny

Lewis has worked harder for tonight's tussle than for any bout of his career. He is in even better condition than he was when he defeated Joe Stecher for the title

"I have perfected a defense against Sonnenberg's flying tackle," said Lewis. "I also have a flying tackle of my own. I feel that my headlock will prove much more deadly than Sonnenberg's flying tackle. I shall once more be heavyweight wrestling champion after tonight's bout."

THE athletic commissioners of four states will watch the battle from the ringside. Chairman Thomas E. Donohue of the Connecticut commission, former chairman of the National Boxing Association; Edward G. Foster, chairman of the Rhode Island commission; Samuel P. Luzzo of the Illinois commission, and the members of the Massachusetts commission will all be in attendance

A long preliminary card, featuring the semifinal match between Marin Plestina and Wladek Zbyszko, former champion of the world, will precede the main event. The big bout will be started as near 9.45 as possible, and if necessary some of the preliminaries will follow the Sonnenberg-Lewis contest

DERBY WINNER RACES TODAY

The fifth race is the feature of the card at Arlington Park today. In this race Clyde Van Dusen, great winner of the Kentucky Derby; Folking, a horse of ability though somewhat erratic; Dr. Freeland, Dr. Parish and one or two others are entered.

Clyde Van Dusen is the choice of most of the experts to cop the initial honors. The second place winner is not so easy to pick. Folking should be the favorite to place, but the horse has run wide a couple of times lately. The first bad race which showed Folking's wildness was one in which the horse was ridden by Laverne Fator

Folking, if it would run properly all the way, could be right up there racing with Clyde Van Dusen all the way.

Jake Zeramby Hot on Trail of Honeyboy Finnegan

LYNN BOY OUTPOINTS ROUTIS

By RINGSIDE

JAKE ZERAMBY of Lynn, who reached stardom in the boxing game by defeating Andre Routis, world's featherweight champion, in a sensational 10-round bout at the Boston Garden, today turned his big guns on Honeyboy Finnegan of Dorchester.

The 19-year-old Lynn Hebrew gave one of the greatest exhibitions of two-handed fighting ever witnessed in a Boston ring as he pounded his way to a decisive victory over the champion.

Zeramby carried every round but the second, which was even. At long range he outpointed Routis, while he also outfought the Frenchman at close quarters.

Zeramby injured his right duke in the fourth round, but his left hand smashes were enough to keep him out front from that point in the battle.

Max Schmeling, the German Dempsey, sat in a front row seat as his stablemate went down to defeat. The conqueror of Paulino was accorded a tremendous ovation by the crowd when he stood up to make a bow. A rule of the Boxing Commission which prevents other than the principals of the main bout at the next show of a club from being introduced, kept Schmeling out of the ring.

THE Routis-Zeramby tussle was one of the most spectacular affairs ever staged in Boston. Routis kept going forward every second he was in the ring and compelled the Lynn youth to extend himself to the limit to win.

There was plenty of rough fighting at close quarters. Each boxer was twice wrestled to the canvas during merry mixups at close quarters.

In the last round Zeramby pulled the fans from their seats when he cut loose with a sensational rally. He had the Frenchman staggering under a furious attack to the head and body. Routis fought back hard but he was unable to off-set the terrific drive of the Lynn boy.

It is seldom that any boxer has been accorded as wild an ovation as the one received by Zeramby when he ceased punching. The crowd was in such an uproar at the final bell that the boxers did not hear the gong and kept blazing away at each other until pried apart by Referee Johnny Brassil.

Flagstead Signs With Pittsburgh

New York, July 9—Manager Donie Bush of the Pittsburgh Pirates announced that he had signed Ira Flagstead ex-star American League outfielder to serve the Pirates in the capacity of a pinch hitter.

Flagstead formerly played with the Red Sox but went to Washington by the waiver route this season. He recently received his unconditional release from the Senators.

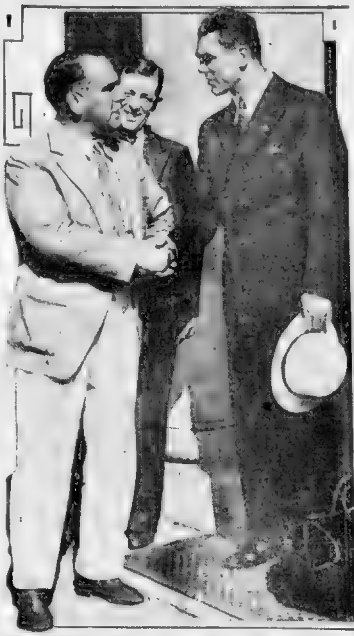
When the other American League clubs waived on his services he became a free agent under the 10-year rule. Flagstead and Bush were teammates at Detroit a number of years ago.

Al Weston Goes to Providence Club

Providence, July 9 (AP)—"Red" Peary, leading pitcher of the Eastern League, was recalled from Providence by the Boston Braves. Manager King Bader of the Grays announced.

Peary came to the Grays earlier in the season from the Braves and has won ten and lost one game here. At the same time, it was announced that Red Barron, outfielder, was being returned to Providence and Al Weston and Dick Harrell, college players, would join the club tomorrow.

GERMAN DEMPSEY TAKES IN SIGHTS OF MODERN ATHENS



Max Schmeling comes to grips with Ed Lewis and, incidentally, the conqueror of Paulino wishes the Strangler success in his bout with Gus Sonnenberg at Fenway Park tonight.

Of course, Max took in the Public Library among other places. Though not posing as a bookworm like Gene Tunney, Schmeling is well read and is a great admirer of the two German scientists whose names are lettered on the base of the statuary group in front of Boston's temple of learning.

Max travels light, as is indicated by the handbag in which he is carrying his luggage.

Track Athletes in New Haven Workout

NEW HAVEN, Ct., July 9—Track athletes of Yale, Harvard, Oxford and Cambridge fraternized in the dining room and at Yale Field and had a good day in spite of the excessive heat. The pick of the athletes of the four great universities is here for a brief training period preparatory to their biennial track meet which will be held within the Harvard Stadium Saturday.

The four teams, with their coaches, managers and a few others, will leave New Haven for Cambridge tomorrow morning at 11:40 and will put in three afternoons of light work at the Stadium.

Track meets between the combined teams of Yale and Harvard and Oxford and Cambridge have been going on quite regularly every two years since 1899 and when the British athletes defeated the Americans in England in 1927 7 to 5, they squared the account over the 30-year span. Saturday's meet, therefore, will hold more than the usual interest for the alumni and friends of the four universities.

A group of more than 60 athletes, coaches, managers and athletic officials assembled at the New Haven Lawn Club for luncheon. The presiding officer was John M. Cates, director of athletics at Yale and a former Yale track captain. Cates spoke of the mutual good which comes as a result of these dual meets, declaring that they are excellent things for the advancement of the athletics and that they go a long way toward further cementing the already friendly bonds between the two great English-speaking countries.

CATES called up Dr. R. Salisbury Woods of Cambridge and Harry B. Kennedy, acting mayor of the city of New Haven, who spoke briefly. The acting mayor gave the visitors the keys to the city, but it was too warm to do much visiting and they spent a quiet day.

Later buses carried the athletes to Yale Field where they worked out in the hot sun for about two hours following the taking of the official pictures of the two combined teams. A week spent in practice at Cambridge has resulted in putting on a nice coat of tan on the Yale and Harvard men, in striking contrast to the white bodies of the British team members.

There are three American athletes in the Oxford-Cambridge group which practiced at Yale Field yesterday, all of whom were stars during their college days here.

Max Wishes to Battle Sharkey

Max Schmeling, the German Dempsey, was greeted by large crowds every place he went during his Boston visit. He came here with Andre Routis, his stable mate.

Schmeling visited the Public Library and many other points of interest while in this city. He also paid a visit to Strangler Lewis who battles Gus Sonnenberg tonight.

He left for Providence today. He will appear in an exhibition boxing bout there tonight.

Schmeling was firm in declaring he would not box Phil Scott in New York. He declared he wanted to fight Jack Sharkey in September and was willing that the match be promoted in any part of the United States or Canada.

Jimmy Reid Winding Up Harvard Career

By JOHN GILLOOLY

HARVARD fans, who'll watch Jimmy Reid run under the colors of the Crimson for the last time against Oxford and Cambridge Saturday afternoon in the Stadium, [illegible] the Somerville flier is going to wind up his Harvard history book in amazing style.

In fact, there'll be many disappointed if Jimmy doesn't travel over the two-mile course in record time. Conditions all point to such a performance. Reid is running better than ever at present. The stadium track is fast and he'll be facing a great two-miler, L. Pumphreys of Oxford-Cambridge.

Pumphreys ran the two miles against the All-Canada team last Saturday in the time of 9:35 2-5.

JIMMY set a new intercollegiate mark for the two miles in the intercollegiates at Franklin Field when he covered the distance in 9:22. He turned in another stirring performance less than a week ago in the City of Boston games even though the track was soft and the wind was blowing.

Besides being the collegiate record holder for two miles Reid has held the mile and cross-country championships during his varied career at Harvard.

No matter how fast Pumphreys can run the two miles it won't be [illegible]

Reid is one of the five members of the present Harvard-Yale team who have competed against the British before. The last meet was held at Stamford Bridge, England, on July 2, 1927. It turned out to be a victory for the Oxford-Cambridge team, the score being 7-5.

REID ran third in the three-mile run finishing behind MacDonald Smith of Yale and O'Connor of Oxford.

Charles Engle of [illegible], George Wolf and [illegible], all of Yale, are the other five members who figured in the defeat of the Yankees at Stamford Bridge two years ago.

Sturdy, who is favored to win the pole vault on Saturday, finished second to his teammate Sabin Carr.

Engle, who is likely to run either the quarter-mile or the furlong, placed fourth in the quarter-mile in the last contest. Rinkel of Cambridge, Leigh Wood of Oxford and Ross of Yale were in front of him.

Sid Kesselhorst figured as a possible double winner on Saturday in the 100 and 220 low hurdles, followed Lord Burghley to the tape in the low flights two years ago.

Bayes Norton, the sprinter and broad jumper, and Leigh Wood, the fast quarter-miler, are British veterans. Norton finished second in both sprints two years ago and Leigh Wood took a second in the quarter.

Braves Are Badly in Need of a Good Shortstop

WEAKNESS THERE IS COSTLY

By JOE CASHMAN

THE BRAVES are badly in need of a shortstop. They are losing game after game that they would win if Maranville, or somebody who could come close to filling his shoes were on the job.

And they are in grave danger of dropping into the cellar because of the lack of suitable men to hold down this important position.

The last place Cincinnati Reds are not very far behind the Tribe and they come here tomorrow for a four game series. It will be a miracle if they don't knock the natives into the cellar unless the latter's shortstop play improves.

The Braves are not badly off except at short. They have won three out of eight games from the Cubs and Giants, two of the strongest outfits in the circuit, since coming home. They would have split even or better if they had somebody who could spell Rabbit.

It is certain that there is nobody on the club now who can. [illegible] Dugan and Bobby Smith were tried and found wanting and Lester Bell who was shifted there yesterday was worse if anything than the other subs.

The third sacker might do better after he becomes more accustomed to the job but he showed nothing in his debut to indicate that he will.

It would seem as though Judge Fuchs should recall Bernie James from Baltimore or some other rookie infielder he has in the minors, under option, if he has any desire to stay off the bottom.

TODAY the Cubs will end their second series of the year. Either Bobby Jones or Fred Cantwell will hurl for the Braves.

The last two games of the current engagement have been parades for the Cubs. The final tilt should be a better affair. Either Jones or Cantwell can give any club plenty of trouble when in form, and both are primed to hurl this game.

And since Joe McCarthy plans to use his ace, Pat Malone, a close battle is in prospect.

THE Cubs made almost as many hits off [illegible] Leverett and [illegible] right-handers on Monday [illegible] they did off the southpaw delivery of Ed Brandt and Percy Jones on the Sabbath. [illegible] had been handed them [illegible]

They scored four runs in the second without much [illegible] due to [illegible] by Bell and scored a few more earned runs in the next few frames.

So it was no more than natural that they started to hit Leverett hard later on. No hurler can be expected to be effective when his supporting cast is booting the ball all over the field and is helpless at the bat.

The Cubs are good, but not so much better than the Braves as the scores of the last two games might indicate.

Let the Braves get a shortstop, and they will cause the western invaders plenty of trouble. If they don't get one, however, they can't hope to do much winning until Maranville returns.

Two Star Mermaids in Revere Meet

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

TWO of the New England girls' swimming stars, Joan McSheehy of Whitinsville and Albina Osipowich of Worcester, will make their farewell appearance tomorrow night at the Boston Swimming Association meet, which is to be held at the Nautical Garden pool, Revere Beach boulevard.

The pair of crack swimmers and record holders are leaving here next week to sail for Honolulu. Both girls are among the world's best swimmers, Albina Osipowich holding all free-style championships for this section and was Olympic champion, 100-meters champion and record holder. The other star, Joan McSheehy, within the last year burst into the honor class by winning all backstroke races, had a national championship, setting up a record.

This pair of star swimmers will join a group of the leading stars, who are to make a trip to Honolulu and on their return will tour the United States.

Miss Osipowich is out to attempt to establish a record tomorrow night in a special 110-yard race. The present mark of 1 minute 30 1-5 seconds is held by Martha Norelius which the latter made in 1927. Joan McSheehy will attempt to better Adelaide Lambert's mark of 1 minute 30 1-5 seconds made in 1927 for the 110-yards backstroke.

THE Boston Swimming Association also offers a meet with [illegible] at stake, the New England [illegible] 100-meters free style for girls and 220-yards free style for men. The competition in these two events should be of the keenest.

Fifteen entries have been received for the girls championship event, including those of Marion Troop, Margaret Butler, Hazel French and Catherine Lynch of the Boston Swimming Association, Anna [illegible] of the Worcester Boys Club Auxiliary, Betty Greenleaf, Marion Stafford and Gladys Norris of the Women's Swimming Association of Brookline.

The 220-yard freestyle junior championship race for men will bring out a classy list of starters including Frank Sack, Edward Murphy, Clayton Osborne and James Kean of the Boston Swimming Association, Thomas McNally, Carleton Neil and Roy [illegible] of Worcester and John Kenney and William O'Brien of the Boys Club of Boston while William Spiller and James Coutts also are slated to compete.

The program will also have 100-meters freestyle novice for men, 100-meters freestyle for women novices and 100-meters breast stroke for women.

By DICK McSWEENEY

The lone Twi contest scheduled for today is an important one for the South Boston team, since that aggregation is striving to wrest first half honors from the grip of Quincy.

It took the Southie bunch 11 innings to down Reading when last they met and it also took a pinch single by O'Keefe to break the deadlock and give the verdict to the Southie clan.

Reading has certainly shown an improvement in the past few games it has played and will be a troublesome opponent for Southie tonight. The game will be played at C. J. Lee playgrounds, South Boston.

Gourley has been selected to unfurl his shoots for Reading, while Smith has drawn the South Boston heaving assignment.

Parsons, Merritt and Zapustis continue to clout the ball hard for South Boston and Neil Mahoney is performing in a consistent manner behind the plate.

Smith, McNamara and McNulty have done much to keep the South Boston pitching on a high level and their work this week will be eagerly followed by Southie rooters.

Quincy is inactive tonight but has a game scheduled with Salem for tomorrow night.

Golf Notes

Due to the non-arrival of many of the out of state golfers, the field in the Country Club day, celebrated yesterday at the Woodland Golf Club under the auspices of the New England Leather and Shoe Association, was smaller than it has been for years.

But aside from the small field which numbered approximately 138, the Country Club day again established itself as one of the finest tournaments in this country.

The New England Shoe and Leather Association offered no less than 96 prizes, 31 of which were awarded to the retail division and an equal number was donated for the best 17 gross and 17 net scores in the class for manufacturers while 26 prizes went to the allied division.

No finer array of trophies has ever been offered at a golf tournament and some of the fifteenth gross and sixteenth net prizes were equal in value to first gross and first net trophies of open tournaments.

John J. Daly of Woodland won a beautiful leather bag, a set of matched woods and a set of registered irons for being low gross in the retail division. Daly turned in a [illegible] which achievement should be credited in the main to his putter, for he had no less than 8 one putt greens.

In the manufacturers' division, Barney Driscoll of Fredericksburg, Va., nosed out C. Searles Reed of Thorns Lea by one stroke, the Virginian scoring a 75.

In the allied division Fred [illegible] and Charles Shaw topped the field with 79s but the Wollaston club champion lost out on the draw and took second gross.

There were some wild net scores turned in, many of which were in the 60s but one member who carried around a 30-stroke handicap and then shot an 81 which would have given him a 51 net became conscience stricken and refused to allow his card to be turned in.

Another hitherto unheard of display of honesty was furnished by K. W. Wolcott, of Sharon, who refused a handicap and then took an 82.

H. Rhodes of St. Clair, Pa., turned in a card, which when posted indicated at first glance that he had blown in the second round after getting a 78. But a closer study showed that his 78 was for the first 9 holes and his 99 was for his homeward journey. However, Rhodes carried home one of the special prizes for battling his way to a snappy 177.

Bill Arnold should take a complete rest before the qualifying round of the State amateur championship, which will be played next week at the Belmont Spring Country Club. If ever a player was over golfed it is Bill Arnold of Cohasset, and unless he gets all thoughts of the game out of his mind for a week he will make a sad showing at Belmont. Arnold was 43—40—83 at Woodland yesterday, which is at least 10 strokes more than he should have been.

CHELSEA HAS NEW 8-CLUB TWI LEAGUE

The efforts of Joe Sanderson to start an industrial twilight baseball league was crowned with success when, after a meeting of officials of several factories, the Chelsea Industrial League was formed.

Sanderson, who has figured prominently in amateur sports in Chelsea for many years, has donated a huge silver trophy to be awarded to the winning team.

At the meeting, a 36-game schedule was drawn up, and it was decided to play three games a week, all games to start at 6.15 p. m. This schedule will take the teams into the latter part of September.

Portland vs. Brockton for Boosters' Day

By CHARLES HOFFMAN

THE BIG Booster Day program scheduled at Brockton has been put over until today. Portland is the attraction in a double-header.

Haverhill is setting a winning pace in this half. The team has won five straight without tasting defeat. Jack Driscoll, player-manager, drove in the winning run in the game with Nashua. Chick Fraser, Revere youngster, was on the mound for the winners.

The Lynn and Manchester series has seen some smart baseball. The first game at Manchester, Saturday, went 15 innings, Manchester emerging the victor, 4 to 3. Sunday at Lynn, in a double-header, Lynn took two games by one-run margins, 3 to 2 and 5 to 4. In the fourth game at Lynn the two teams battled to a 3-to-3 tie.

New Bedford is leading the league in club batting, having an advantage of four points over Lynn.

Marty Donovan is back calling them in this league and the team of Daum and Donovan is together

Portland at Brockton in a double header, Lewiston and New Bedford, Lynn at Manchester and Haverhill at Nashua make up the schedule for today.

Bill Lehman, New Bedford third sacker, is leading the League batters, although Saunders, the Portland slugger, has played in 11 more games than the Whalers' hot corner man. Lehman is clubbing the apple for .422, while Saunders is 10 points behind with a .412 average.

Manchester has two of the best hitting pitchers in the league in Shatzer and Lovely.

Red Sweeney, Brockton's pitching ace, hails from the South, and if Art Ryan had a couple of more twirlers of his kind would be right up there fighting for the top. This lad, in his first year in this league, so far has won nine and lost five and if he continues his good work will soon be in higher company.

GOLDEN WHEEL RACE AT OVAL SATURDAY

One of the classic bike races of the season, the great Golden Wheel 50-mile event, is carded for Saturday night at the Revere Cycle Track. There will be six riders seeking the gold and glory that goes with winning the long race.

Among the starters will be Al Letourneur, the fighting Frenchman, who broke George Wiley's hour record last Saturday night, George Chapman, veteran Newark rider, who has won the American championship six times; Franz Duelberg, the German star; Frankie Keenan of Revere, Victor Hopkins of Iowa, a former title holder, and Francesco Zucchetti of Italy.

The Golden Wheel race is one of the oldest in America, and annually draws a capacity crowd at Revere. Nat Butler is making preparations to handle more than 10,000 Saturday night.

The feature race will not lack for support, for as a semifinal Butler has arranged a special sprint match, with Freddy Spencer, champion, opposing Jimmy Walthour and Orlando Piani. There will also be shorter races for amateurs and pros.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

EVERYONE ENTITLED TO HAPPINESS—DR. BISCH

Finds This State of Mind to Be a Problem

By LOUIS E. BISCH, MD., Ph.D
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

EVERYONE wants to be happy. Everyone ought to be happy.

Every human being is entitled to happiness.

But what shall be looked upon as true happiness? This has puzzled many people.

We think of a state of mind or being which, it would seem, ought to make an individual happy and then immediately we think of somebody just like that who isn't happy at all.

The fact of the matter is that different things make different people happy. Jewels and pretty clothes make women happy as a rule, but even as to that there are exceptions.

It is generally believed that wealth brings happiness.

Rather, those who are without wealth think they would be happy if they had plenty of money. Yet we all know of persons who claim that their unhappiness started when the gold began to pour into their coffers, that before they rested content with simple enjoyments. Wealth, with its new responsibilities, often creates anxiety and fear.

A good job well done gives happiness.

There really are few exceptions to that.

To give happiness to others yields happiness to oneself. At least most people are constituted that way.

Achieving one's ambition in life often gives a feeling of satisfaction which amounts to happiness. In this case, however, one is likely to approach the goal set for oneself so gradually that one does not mark happiness as beginning at any particular time.

Music can make people happy. The right kind of music for the mood of the moment is often sure-fire. Works of art of all kinds will make people happy who know how to appreciate the beautiful.

Books offer an unlimited supply of happiness. Unfortunately the average persons does not read books half enough.

Love, despite its uncertainties, may produce exquisite happiness.

The same may be said of children. They may be very trying at times but, when all is said and done, they can give us much comfort and joy.

Religion may be a source of great happiness.

All the examples—and there are, of course, many others—are based more or less upon outward influences, things in the environment that react upon our emotions.

There is a source of happiness, however, that really transcends them all. It is the truest, because it is not dependent so much upon outward influence. This is the happiness which emanates from within oneself.

It is that complete adjustment of body in good health and your mind free from worry and all sorts of happiness will bubble out of it.

You don't have to depend upon your environment—where you are, what you have and what people do to you—for happiness.

There is plenty of it which you can automatically engender within yourself.

A PIRATE BRIDGE

"A Pirate Bridge in the summer is especially intriguing since most of us feel like pirates during the hot weather and so welcome anything which coincides with such a more or less 'savage' mood.

Martha Lee

Have your party on the lawn or porch with your color scheme of orange and black. Tiny boats may be built as center pieces for the small tables. They can be made of orange and black cardboard or white cardboard, covered with orange and black tissue or crepe paper. Each should have a large black sail with the pirate's skull and crossbones pasted on each in white.

The boat may be simply made of three pieces of cardboard for sides and deck, with a long stick such as are used on flags for the mast, on which the black sail floats triumphantly.

A pirate grab bag for the nuts and candies. Packages of sweets and nuts are wrapped in orange paper tied with black ribbon, one or two for each guest, and are grabbed for as the hostess wishes, or may be given for the price of a forfeit. The tables are covered with black and orange tarlatan cloths and the prizes, when given, come in small pirate's chests, which may be as large as a shoe box, if the hostess wishes, and through which the winner hunts and hunts until he finds his piece of eight.

Apricot and Black Fig Cocktail
or Fruit Filled Cantaloupe
Baked Stuffed Fish
Fried Egg Plant
Golden White Potatoes
Hot Boston Brown Bread
Orange Salad in Black Paper Cups
Chocolate Bread Pudding with Whipped Cream
Coffee

APRICOT AND BLACK FIG COCKTAIL.

Arrange equal quantities of diced stewed apricots and orange sections in cocktail glasses. Dice black figs over the top, allowing as much fig for each cocktail as makes a good color contrast. Mix some of the apricot syrup with lemon juice and pour over the fruit.

To prepare the cantaloupes chill them, cut in halves and remove the seeds. With a vegetable scoop cut out small depressions in the flat rim of flesh. Fit very dark red or black cherries in the holes, leaving the stems pointing outward. Fill the hollow of the cantaloupe with chilled cherries, seeded and halved, mixed with equal quantities of diced pineapples, sliced peaches or crushed strawberries.

ORANGE SALAD IN BLACK PAPER CUPS

Cut oranges in halves, dice the pulp, mix with French dressing and a few fresh berries, put back into skins, put oranges together and wrap in black tissue paper so that when served the oranges look like a miniature bomb with fuse ready to light. This is done by twisting the ends of the paper together much as one twists the ends of a paper bag.

CHOCOLATE BREAD PUDDING WITH WHIPPED CREAM.

Soak two cups stale bread crumbs for 30 minutes in four cups of hot milk. Melt two squares of chocolate, add two-thirds cup of sugar and thin with a little of the liquid from the bread. Add to bread mixture with two slightly beaten eggs. Add one fourth teaspoon salt and one teaspoon vanilla and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until firm and knife comes out clean.

The Unseen Playmate

DRAWN BY Dorothy Flack

THE Scene: Any happy home!

The Actors: A family where ever abides Love.

And there you have the greatest play that has ever been written. Two whose hearts have found each other and in happiness and devotion have shared their lives and their dearest dreams and ambitions. And now that there are four, where but two started on the path to happiness it seems as though nothing else in the world could bring any greater bliss.

Carefully they watch over these tiny beings whose lives and destinies are in their hands. Lovingly they watch their play and their joy in the bubbles which so colorfully and so gracefully float above their heads. And in the hearts of each is the vision of the unseen playmate carefully watching over their loved charges.

The same Dan Cupid who brought their hearts together still dwells with them always, keeping watch over their hearts and their family, so that the same Love which brought them each to the other will dwell forever in their hearts and home.

How can they be otherwise but proud and happy? For where Love dwells there you can find eternal happiness. And when the curtain of life goes down they'll make their exit secure in the knowledge of their success, for hasn't Love been their director, and hasn't he written the play which has brought them the wealth of happiness and a life well lived?

ATHLETICS and GOOD LOOKS

By MARIA JERITZA

DO athletics harm beauty?

This question was raised recently when a well-known German lawn tennis champion was obliged to give up her playing because eye trouble developed.

Not many years ago I heard a languid lady protesting that athletics gave women an over-muscular, almost masculine appearance and encouraged brusque manners and the hail-fellow-well-met attitude toward men which is far-removed from charm. This viewpoint is old-fashioned today—in fact is regarded as Victorian.

Health is the foundation of feminine beauty and athletics encourage good health, therefore, athletics encourage feminine beauty. Surely this logic is unanswerable.

Yet the girl who goes in for athletics may need constant vigilance to offset certain detrimental influences on her complexion, grooming and manners in order to get all the good and none of the unfortunate results from her sports and games.

She must first and foremost avoid over-exertion. Over-fatigue drains a woman's nervous vitality, and brings physical symptoms of exhaustion, including lines on the face, dull eyes, and loss of natural good spirits and vivacity. Always stop exercising before you become very tired. After your game of tennis or round of golf, horseback ride or strenuous hike, cool off, take a warm and then a cool shower, and rest awhile before you dress or eat.

If your muscles ache from unwonted exertion, rub them with a mixture of three parts of massage alcohol to one part of spirits of camphor. You will find this lotion invigorating and refreshing.

Sometimes women athletes have a strained look about the eyes. Protect your eyes while you are playing tennis, rowing or indulging in any other sport in the glare of sunlight. Eyeglasses with tinted glass will relieve your eyes on a motor trip.

Miss Helen Wills is renowned for her fresh, unlined young beauty. But you will note that in playing tennis in sunlight she always wears an eyeshade.

Rough manners, slangy talk need not result from outdoor life and athletics. There is no reason why an athletic girl should not possess her full share of feminine charm.

Frequent trips to a beauty shop and occasionally a facial massage together with sensible beauty measures at home should keep you faultlessly well-groomed and flawless of complexion, even though you may indulge in athletics to your heart's content, provided, of course, you follow the good old Greek motto, "Moderation in all things."

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer American readers' questions on etiquette. Write to here, care of this newspaper.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN.

At the present time I am enjoying the friendship of a very nice man and find that only what he calls a breach of etiquette may end this friendship unless you come to the rescue very soon. I have gone out with many young men and have never had this silly argument arise before—so needless to say it is annoying—especially considering that I think a lot of this friend, though he thinks I am not showing my appreciation of his company when I am with him. My friend in this case argues that it is perfectly proper and expected that when a young lady goes out with a gentleman—in order to show him all respect due him—she should at all times take his arm while they are in public.

I never do this. I have of my free will made it a point never to take my escort's arm, but do agree and believe that it is proper to accept his assistance in crossing a thoroughfare or getting on or off cars by letting him take my arm for the time being—or while his assistance is really necessary.

What is your idea of a girl showing a young man she appreciates his company at any time? Do you know of any specific way of showing such appreciation? I am not demonstrative. Some people call my attitude cool toward men—I think I'll remain cool—if being really friendly means being demonstrative.

Will you please let me know what you think of holding a young man's arm in public?

MARY PALMER.

I AGREE with you whole-heartedly and most enthusiastically in your attitude against taking the young man's arm. There are several social details that inevitably stamp a person as "unaccustomed"—I almost said "hick." One is putting the handle of the knife on the table, as one rests the knife—or fork, too, as a matter of fact. Another is saying "Pleased to meet you" when acknowledging an introduction. Another is saying "Likewise" when responding to "I am very glad to have met you."

And another is for a girl to drape herself on a man's arm as they walk on the street or, for instance, across a dance floor. Although, of course, it is far worse for him to take her arm. This way of walking is not in good form—perhaps because this is an independent age—and a person of breeding has the same reaction to it that you have.

There are better and finer ways of showing interest in a friendship and enthusiasm for it. Vivid vital interest in the other person's interests and activities, enthusiastic attention when he or she is speaking and enthusiastic responses to the other person's comments, thoughtfulness in cultivating the friendship, always an acknowledgment of the other person's thoughtfulness or kindness or hospitality—these are far more significant than taking the other person's arm. These things show a person's spirit, his or her native reaction to other people, breeding, social accustomedness; and they bind us to our friends "with hoops of steel."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Small linen articles or garments that have yellowed through careless laundering can be restored to their original whiteness by boiling them for half an hour in a mixture of milk and water to which a little shredded soap has been added. Rinse in several lots of tepid water, adding a small piece of blue to the last.

Varnished wood is best cleaned with cold tea strained from the leaves. If the wood is very dirty, a little warm soap and water may be used, but only to remove the outer dirt; the tea will not injure the varnish.

Hot bran is cleansing and purifying. Mattresses treated with it take on a new lease of life. Sprinkle the bran thickly over one side and leave for ten minutes or so. Then brush it off and beat the mattress hard. Treat the other side in the same way.

Turpentine removes grease stains from carpets. Use the turpentine on a piece of cloth, and rub vigorously until the spot has disappeared, rub afterwards with a dry duster to remove all trace of the turpentine.

If you run out of furniture polish, use equal quantities of vinegar and paraffin. Put into a bottle and shake well.

FADS OF FASHION

Refusing to be the under dog, a scarf which accompanies a woolen tailleur, after being wound round the throat, projects itself out into the open through a slit in the coat. The scarf is of a bright material, and makes contrast to the brown and beige tweed of the coat.

Sprinkling the flowers won't be difficult if you use them as part of the decoration scheme of your umbrella. Since umbrellas are now in daily demand, they have become the most modish of our accessories. Very trim is a black silk umbrella with a deep border of some rich dark flowers.

If you believe in advertising your favorite or star sport, you had better acquire a sports sweater bearing golf, tennis or riding designs. One sweater for golf has a background of beige, with a design of a girl swinging clubs done in brown, red and orange. These sweaters are designed for actual sportswear and have long sleeves and V necks.

South, West and North passing, East, with 8½ probable tricks in Hearts, including 4½ distributed quick tricks, makes the forcing bid of two Hearts. South passing, West gives the minimum assist in response to the call. North passing, East bids four Hearts for game. As West has given no encouragement for a Slam bid, and two Club tricks would defeat such bid, the safe bid is no more than four Hearts.

South's correct opening is the Ace of Clubs, upon which North should play the encouraging 8. South continuing, North's King wins and North should then shift to Spades, leading up to Dummy's weakness.

East's Ace of Spades winning, East, with ten trumps in the combined hands, leads the Ace of Hearts, and, capturing the King, then takes the rest of the tricks.

BOYS HOME FROM PREP

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

IT was amazing to "sit in" on the following conversation between two parents of boys at "prep" school, amazing because the parents are well-read, intelligent, thinking people.

"Bill and Buddy got home today!" exulted the mother beaming. Well, that part was all right. Any mother is happy to welcome her fledglings back to the home nest for the summer. But the next statement and the manner in which it was made, by the father, was surprising.

"Yes, sir! Home in 36 hours and never paid a cent of the railroad fare money I sent them. Came home only minus a couple of dollars for food and a hotel room one night."

"How could they possibly do that?" I inquired. "Did they walk?"

"Not by a jugful," chuckled the father. "They rode every foot of the way. Hitched rides for 500 miles, in motor cars."

Then Buddy spoke up. "Yup, but it was tough sledding part of the time. Gee, guys with big cars are stingy. They scoot past you and know darned well which way you want to go and they have plenty of room—big back seats empty—but they wouldn't give a guy a lift for anything. It's the fellows in the little old battered cars that stop and pick you up."

The father chuckled. "But you got here, didn't you, old Scout? By George, you can't stop those boys. They'll get what they want in this world."

And maybe they will. But I'm wondering just HOW they are going to go about it. Bill had admitted that the affluence of the fellow in the "big" cars excited him to a desire to "get in" on the good things even if he had to—well he didn't say hold him up, but it was so plainly suggested that it made you shudder.

Begging rides is getting something for nothing. Envying the man with a car, is the seed of labor versus capital troubles, and no boy should harbor the ideas of Bill and Buddy, that every man who has money is an old ogre and that only the poor struggling little fellow with a small car is any good. The man with the big car probably worked hard for the fortune which enables him to have one, and he is in no sense called upon to pick up every college student who jerks a finger in the direction of the next town. I'd rather, if I had a son, have him spend every cent he had to travel legitimately than to ask favors, the asking of which gradually develops into demanding those favors as his just due.

Some states make an offense, punishable by law, of picking up people along the roadside. It is a good law and one which I for one, would like to see used in every state in the union.

SMART SAYINGS OF CLEVER CHILDREN

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for published smart sayings. Address "Smart Sayings," Boston Evening American.

Pepi—Mama, may I say something?

Mama—You know the rule is that you must not speak at the table.

Pepi—But may I say just one word?

Mama—No, Pepi; but when papa has finished the paper you may speak.

Papa finally lays the paper on the table.

Mama—Now, Pepi, what did you wish to say?

Pepi—I wanted to tell you that the water is running over the tub on the floor in the bathroom.

This Day in Our History

ON July 9, 1917, President Wilson issued a proclamation which stated that effective August 5, the entire National Guard of the various states would be drafted into federal service for the duration of the World War. Though in the U. S. army, each state quota preserved its esprit de corps.

APRIL'S SOWING

by ROSEMARY REES

You'll look at least on love's remains,
A grave's one violet;
Your look?—that pays a thousand pains.
What's death?—you'll love me yet!"

Hennessey was teaching the new cook to ride.

So, on Saturday afternoon, five days after her arrival at Whangamata, Mary took her first ride with Hennessey.

They had come to the point where the sandy beach ended in rocks round the cliff, and the Beverley road turned inland.

"Now that's queer!" said Hennessey, suddenly pulling up.

"What's queer?" asked his pupil.

"Them two beasts," he pointed up the hillside, where amongst old stumps and flax bushes some black and white cattle were grazing.

"What's queer about them?"

"Then's Friesians. Bayliss don't own any. Spackman up beyond Poturu's the only man that's got Friesians on the coast."

"They've strayed in from somewhere."

Hennessey nodded, though he still looked puzzled.

Returned Hennessey said to Jim: "If ye're talkin' to the boss or the missis ye might tell them that two of Spackman's Friesians is in the paddock down by the Reserve."

"Yes, I suppose that's it."

"Well, I'm goin' to light up the boiler," said Hennessey, with sudden energy— dismissing the subject of the cattle. "She'll be mighty stiff tomorrow if she don't get a good hot bath tonight. That's a fine woman and a lady every inch of her. She'll not be here long, I'm thinkin'. Some fine wealthy young chap'll come along and take her off mighty quick once they see her. It's a long time since I seen one that could hold a candle to her."

They were moving towards the old buggy house, each carrying a saddle. While the old man collected wood for the portable boiler—the Englishman made his way again up the hillside. He was very wretched. He wanted the love of one woman and that woman knew him for a drunkard and despised him.

The hot bath was a boon to Mary. Later she thought of the past—of her wedding night! Eleven years ago. She shut her eyes now—seh wouldn't think of all those old past horrors. At least she'd had the respite of the war! Paul Durant was a fine soldier, they said. He'd fought first in South Africa. Couldn't they understand that he loved it? Loved all the horror—the brutality of it. Lust of blood! Where did that phrase come from? That expressed his character. He'd had taht always—and before the war he'd taken a joy in the torture of any living thing. He loved power—to bend and break a will. He'd never broken hers—it would have been better perhaps if he had.

She wouldn't think of that. Durant was dead. She was free from him for ever. Free from his degrading depravity. Yes, he had been depraved—degenerate.

Surely her mother couldn't have insisted on the marriage—couldn't have compelled her to return to that man, if she'd known the depths of degradation into which she was forcing her daughter? His money dazled everyone, and her mother had been blinded by it; she had always worshipped wealth more than anything else in the world.

She had hoped tonight at last to sleep without the stirring of those haunting memories. It was not to be! Would the time ever come when in the quiet night she would be freed from them?

Carlyon was in the dining-room with Mrs. Bayliss.

Carlyon had posted in his draft to the bank in Beverley three days previously, and had now received his pass-book. Ten pounds, besides the money for the draft, stood to his credit.

Hilda Bayliss was looking slightly flushed, for the interview had already lasted some time.

"I've explained already how it is!" she said. "When you endorsed the drafts I always paid them in'o my own account. That was the simplest way. It was no use botnering you every week to sign cheques."

"But how much am I supposed to be paying you?" asked Carlyon.

"I don't know whether you want to see all the figures. I've got them down somewhere." She fumbled amongst some loose sheets of paper. "Whiskey, of course, was a pretty big item! And there's your board and lodging, and grazing for your horse, and tobacco."

Jim Carlyon did not look up. His eyes were bent upon the papers before him and he was very white.

"I'm sorry," he answered. "I've only just begun to realize that. Of course I'm . . . I'm in your debt for having been so patient with me. I'l try to hehave more decently in the future."

Mrs. Bayliss grew a trifle redder. That was not at all what she desired. She wanted very much to pick a quarrel.

"If you're going to turn teetotal," she said, "a public house isn't the best place for you to stay. You ought to get some work to do."

He lifted his eyes to her face. "I want to do that," he said. "Isn't there anything I could do here? You've a certain amount of sheep work on your little place. It takes up your time and Harry's. Why not let me do some of that?"

"Oh, no, Jim! You wouldn't be much use to us."

He had no answer to this. He could not explain that though he was wretched here he could not tear himself away—he must stay on if it were at all possible.

"You've never bought any Friesians, have you? Spackman hasn't sold many, I know."

There was a little pause before Mrs. Bayliss asked in an add voice, "Friesians? No. Why?" "Hennessey says some of Spackman's Friesians are in the paddock at the edge of the Reserve."

"Poor old Hennessey! He's always mixing things up now-a-days. I'm afraid we won't be able to keep him much longer." Carlyon stared at her in surpise.

"Hennessey! Why, he's got an eye that's as keen as a needle for stock!"

"He used to have," admitted Mrs. Bayliss. "But he makes most mistakes now."

"But Friesians are absolutely unmistakable. There's no other black and white cattle on the coast."

She rose and gathered up her untidy papers. The interview was at an end. More than ever she was determined that Whangamata was no place for Carlyon.

Mary awoke the next day to a session of cold, driving rain.

Just before the midday dinner a mud bespattered car arrived from Poturu. Through the open kitchen door she saw two men in oilskins and a third in an old army trench coat.

A STORY FULL OF TENSE INTEREST

"April's Sowing" is a story of mystery, life and love in the South Seas. The mystery and identity of a woman who sells herself as cook in a small public house, yet bears every earmark of a lady and one used to wealth, is the prime character in this fine story by Rosemary Rees.

A remittance Englishman of fine family, smarting under an unjust accusation of theft, is the other big character.

As a story of life, love and mystery nothing has been written for a long time to equal this story,

Read It Now

The wearer of the trench coat—who carried a small brown bag in from the car—was a tall, loosely built man, whom Mary judged to be between 30 and 35 years of age. He clever face was somewhat lined and weather-beaten. He was laughing as he spoke to Bayliss. Mary liked the sound of his laugh and of his voice.

"We've had a devil of a time!" he was saying. "In and out of the water table a dozen times and nearly over the edge once or twice."

Carlyon was in his room wrestling with psychology and Doctor Coue—and feeling even more ill than he had felt the previous day. He came to his bedroom door and Mary heard Bayliss say, "Here's Doctor Stewart just come in from Poturu and wants you to lend him some slippers."

Into the Englishman's face flashed a sudden smile. Mary saw it and decided that Dr. Stewart's dancing blue eyes held some sort of charm. She had never seen Carlyon smile before!

"Come along to my room, Stewart," he said.

"I can't, you ass, until I get the slippers," responded Stewart. "I want to leave my boots out here."

When he had joined Carlyon and the door of the latter's room closed behind them, Mary felt that some spirit of cheerfulness and gaiety had departed.

A little later Hennessey came in for his meal, and he was full of information concerning Dr. Stewart.

"He's a fine lad—one of the best—is the Doc," he remarked. "He's always up and down the coast, for there's no doctor now at Poturu. He'll be here now until the creek goes down, unless he rides into Beverley. They'll not get across the creek with a car for two days."

"Not if the rain stops?"

Hennessey shook his head. "No, not if it stopped this blessed minute, and it's not going to do that. It's from the south. It might blow itself out tonight, there's no knowin'. If it was comin' from the northeast now, it wouldn't stop for three days."

Hennessey continued the Stewart saga. "He was away to the war directly it started, and him only just begun as a doctor in Beverley, he wouldn't stay in New Zealand a minute when the war was on. I tried meself to go, but they wouldn't take me."

"Did you, Hennessey?" Mrs Brandon's voice was very gentle.

"Told me I was too old! Too old! And I could beat any of those boys at a good day's work. And I come of a fightin' family. Me father was a soldier."

"It'll be a lucky girl that gets Alick Stewart," went on the old man. "But I doubt if he'll marry. He's like me. He knows when he's well off!"

In the dining room Bayliss, his wife, Carlyon; Doctor Stewart, the commercial traveler, and "Bill Smith," having left very little of the large apple tart, were praising the skill of the maker. Stewart asked Mrs. Bayliss who and what she was. "She isn't a New Zealander, is she?"

"Oh, no! an emigrant.

"She's wearing a V. A. D. uniform, isn't she?" he asked.

"She may be. I think she was a cook in France."

When dinner was over Bayliss invited him into the bar to join them in a "glass of port." As he could not well refuse, he followed the publican and his wife, and then asked in astonishment, "Where's Carlyon?"

"Gone to his room, I expect," answered Mrs. Bayliss shortly. "He's teetotal at present. Didn't you notice how sober he was?"

"I noticed he was looking very ill."

"Of course he is," snapped Mrs. Bayliss. "So would anybody be knocking off everything like that all at once. You talk to him, Doc. Tell him not to be a fool."

Provided thus with an excuse for escaping from the bar, Stewart made his way to Carlyon's room.

"May I come in?" he asked; and without waiting for permission, entered.

"Don't get up!" said the doctor, pulling a chair to the bedside. "What's wrong with you, eh?"

"Knocked off liquor, haven't you?"

Jim nodded.

"Put out your tongue."

To save trouble Carlyon put it out, feeling like a schoolboy. Stewart had his hand on the patient's pulse, and then, producing a thermometer, pushed it into his mouth.

"Doing all your little stunts, aren't yau?" remarked Jim when he was free to speak once more.

"Yes," answered Stewart cheerfully.

"And what are you going to do now you've got me?"

"Put you right." He opened his brown bag.

"Look here, Stewart, you needn't sound me," said Carlyon. "You did that pretty conclusively eight years ago."

The doctor paid no attention to these protests and proceeded calmly with his work.

"There's nothing wrong with you except the sudden knocking off whiskey," he said at last. "You've got a queer heart. I told you that before, but you might live to be ninety——"

"You turned me down for that."

"No doctor would have passed you then—or now—but if you keep off whiskey for a time—a good long time—give yourself a chance you'll be as strong as any man."

He turned to the table. "Hello," he said, Baudoin—Coue—where did you get these?"

"Mrs. Sargent sent them to me."

"Didn't know you knew her."

"I used to see her years ago when I was at the Bell's. She and her daughter were here last Tuesday night. Their car stuck them up, but Gerrard got it going for them and they went on into Beverley next day."

"Is Gerrard that young chap who has the place with McMillan beyond the Reserve?"

"What makes you say that?" he asked after a moment's pause.

"Oh, I don't know," answered Carlyon. "They seemed to get very friendly right from the jump; and then he stayed two days with them in Beverley and came back full of his visit. They'd danced, and played tennis, and motored, and he was Lindsey to her apparently by that time, and she was Joan to him."

There was silence in the little room between the two men—the beating of the rain on the iron roof and the rattling of the window having a curiously melancholy sound.

"Do you believe in love at first sight?" asked Jim at last.

"Why not?" replied the doctor. "If you believe in love at all."

"Don't you?"

Stewart did not answer for a moment. "Yes, for some people I believe in love."

"The sort of romantic, undying love novelists and poets write about?"

The doctor nodded slowly. "Yes, for some but not for everyone. It takes a man or woman with a romantic soul to fall in love and the majority of us aren't romantic." He turned from the window. "I've got a few drugs with me. I'm going to mix you something—nasty tonic—do you good! Do you think that beautiful lady in the kitchen would let me have a jug of water? What's her name?"

"Mrs. Brandon."

In about 10 minutes time he returned with a jug of water and a cup in his hand. "I've been helping to wash up!" he remarked cheerfully. "Unfortunately our esteemed hostess took it into her head to come out into the kitchen, and I had to pretend to be looking for my jug. I thought the fair Hilda might imagine I was trying to get off with the cook. She's much too good to be wasted up here—Mrs. Brandon, I mean, not Hilda. I've a good mind to try and see if I can't get her to come down and keep house for me. You know it isn't right for a woman to look as attractive as that and be able to serve up the sort of dinner we had today. It's not fair to ordinary human men."

Mary's face haunted Stewart.

"Do you know, I've an idea we've met before," he said. "You were in France, weren't you?"

"Yes."

"Where were you?"

"Why, I was there twice! Once as a patient for a week, and for two days afterward visiting a friend."

"That was where you saw me, then, I expect."

"Yes, probably. Small place the world, and rather smaller since the war."

He was sitting in the kitchen by the fire with Hennessey and Carlyon. They were talking about the war.

"There's one thing Hennessey holds up against me, isn't there, Hennessey?" said Stewart. "When all the other doctors turned him down for active service he came to me and tried to get me to certify him fit."

"I was fit enough," growled Hennessey.

"Of course you were, but it was a young man's war. And here's another man whose friendship I nearly lost in the same way, Mrs. Brandon." He indicated Carlyon sitting in the background. "I wouldn't pass him because his heart was queer and to this day he hasn't forgiven me."

Mary looked up startled. She remembered her own words to Carlyon—the scorn for the man who had never offered to fight—and all the while he'd wanted to go! For the first time since that night after he had kissed her, she met his eyes. They were fixed upon her own with a level look she found it difficult to read. There was sadness and pleading, and something else burning in those shadowed eyes which held her own.

She couldn't turn away! It seemed almost as though no one else were in the room—no one else in all the world—only she and Carlyon sitting there gazing at one another as though locked in some enchantment. Then she became aware that Stewart had risen.

"Good-night, Mrs. Brandon!" he was saying. "It's been very good of you to let us sit here."

Carlyon got up without a word and left the kitchen, and suddenly Mary felt that she was trembling as though she had been subjected to a vivid, intense excitement.

In some vague intuitive way—impossible of explanation—she was conscious of the knowledge, irrefutable and unassailable, that Carlyon was trembling just as she was!

FOREST LOVE

by Hazel Livingston

What Has Gone Before

Nancy Hollenbeck, young and beautiful, is poor. Her mother, of a socially accepted family, married a poor man. She warns Nancy against this "mistake." Nancy gives up handsome Mat Tully and begins an affair with Jack Beamer, married to wealth. He plans to divorce his wife and marry Nancy. On a trip to Yellowstone, Nancy meets Roger Decatur, a ranger, who falls in love with her. Nancy tells him she will only marry for wealth. She prepares to leave the mountain camp and rejoin her Aunt Ellie and sister Louise. Roger he declares his love and Nancy admits her love for him. Roger weds her. Aunt Ellie and Louise, at home with Mrs. Hollenbeck, wonder at Nancy's continued absence.

(Now Go On With the Story)

CHAPTER 16

NANCY HOLLENBECK—Nancy Hollenbeck that was—chewed her pen and scowled at the scrawled sheet at the desk before her.

"Oh Lord, I don't know what to say," she yawned, and covered her pink mouth with an ink-stained finger. "You don't know my family, Roger. The devil himself couldn't reason with them once they get an idea in their heads. Now if the Porters ruin everything by writing from Taiae the day I wrote from Reno . . . oh dear. . . ." She groaned, and laughed, and threw him a kiss.

Roger Decatur sprawled full length on the bed, pushed the evening papers aside, and raised himself on one elbow, so that he could get a better look at Nancy. "I wish you'd cut out the monkey business and tell them the truth," he said, a little wistfully.

"Why?"

"You know why. I don't like secrets, Nancy. It—it sort of cheapens things. You and I . . . sneaking——"

He broke off, embarrassed at Nancy's whoop of joy. "Darling, do you mean you're afraid I don't look like your lawfully wedded wife? You sound just like mama! You're going to have something in common after all, you're both so..so respectable!"

"Roger, dear, I will after a while."

"But I mean now."

Nancy's soft red mouth quivered ever so slightly. She pushed the russet curls back from her forehead with a tired gesture. "If you won't understand that I just don't want to worry them, right now with dad half sick, and mama worrying over one thing and another——"

When her voice broke he felt a brute. After all, it was her affair, really. He hadn't any people. No one but Nancy...his wife...whether the world knew it or not...

He came and took her in his arms, rumpling her bright hair, holding her closer . . . closer. Nancy relaxed with a soft little sigh. Her head was on his shoulder, her cheek next to his. She shut her eyes, and the ugly hotel room disappeared . . . so did her half written letter to mama . . . "I do love you, I do!" she whispered. "Nothing matters . . . but us . . ."

Nothing matters . . . but us . . . She really felt that way, when Roger's arms were about her, his brown cheek against hers. Hadn't she run off and married him, without even a trousseau, and not knowing or caring where they were going, or how they were going to live? Nothing mattered, not the hot, dusty ride out of the valley, nor the Bonanza Hotel with its splotched wall paper and squeaky bed. Nothing was real but Roger. . . Roger and love. It was as if she were living, really living for the first time in her life, and all the other things, the things that used to matter so much were half forgotten dreams.

"If anyone had told me that I'd ever start off on a wedding trip with two suitcases full of dirty clothes, and four pairs of scuffed shoes, I'd have said they were CRAZY!" she told Roger on that first giddy, care-free day.

"Why, you're all right. You look beautiful to me," he said, soberly. He meant it, poor dear. Nancy could hardly keep from kissing him, riding through the main street in Reno, in his dusty, weather-beaten car. Her heart beat high. She thought of mama . . . how surprised she'd be. . . . Louise, too . . . Louise would never believe she'd have the courage to go through with it . . . neither would the girls, May Belle Craig and the others . . . poor makeshifts they were getting . . . imitation love. . . "Nobody can say I'm not a good sport!" she thought, with a funny little glow of pride. For so long she had thought of herself as spoiled, and selfish, and gloried in it. But now she was different, everything was different . . . when she was with Roger.

Once he went out, to hunt up some government official—something to do with his work, and left her alone.

"I won't miss you a bit. I'll do a little illegal washing in the wash basin. Maybe I'll even darn a stocking!" she told him, laughing.

But when he was gone and she dragged the suitcases out from under the bed, and poked and pushed through their rumpled contents her high spirits oozed away. She didn't know where to start, there was so much to do. Louise had always done their mending and washing. She felt discouraged and helpless, surrounded by crumpled silks, and sad looking linens. Even the coral chiffon dressing gown looked limp, and the French flowers on one satin mule were loose.

And the room was terrible. Sticky varnish on the dresser. None too clean lace curtains at the windows. "I wish we'd taken a chance, and gone to the good hotel!" she moaned, but that was impossible, of course, with the Porters likely to turn up any minute.

For that matter she might run into Anita Beamer, staying at the palatial Riverside, where all the divorcees and everyone who was anyone stayed in Reno. Anita Beamer, here in Reno getting a divorce so that Jack could marry her, Nancy . . . Poor Jack! How disappointed he would be when he knew that she had jilted him for a ranger . . . a poor ranger who didn't mind awful hotels, and didn't know the difference between new clothes and old . . . "It's so funny!" she thought, giggling helplessly. She thought she was laughing, but her eyes were wet, so she must be crying instead. Roger found her, a wilted little heap beside the scattered clothes on the floor when he came back.

"Don't leave me! Don't leave me again!" she wailed, and he lifted her in his strong arms and comforted her and laughed at her, and they were both happy again.

"The first time you leave me all day I'll probably go home to mama!" she laughed, looking up at him adoringly with wet, velvety eyes.

"Oh, I guess not!" But it frightened him a little. He loved her, more every day, but he realized that he didn't know her as well as he thought he did. She was so independent up there in the High Sierras, and now she was so soft and clinging. She sure cares a lot for me! he thought, half humble, half exulting. "My Nancy!"

It was only when she was clinging that Nancy felt that she knew him at all. Sometimes, seeing him at a little distance, or hearing him speak to some man about something she knew nothing about, he was a stranger. "That's my husband. I'm married to him!" she marveled.

In the church where they were married he had looked so strange and unfamiliar, with his unruly hair slicked down and his funny little toothbrush mustache shaved too close, that it was all she could do to make the proper responses and not cry out—"Oh wait—wait—I'm not sure—I'm afraid I'm getting the wrong man!"

Waking sometimes in the night, with Roger sleeping quietly beside her, she cried in the darkness because her world had turned upside down and she was all alone in a strange, queer place.

Now, with Roger's arms about her, his cheek against hers, she was happy, in spite of the shabby room, her disreputable trousseau, her unquiet thoughts about mama.

"I do love you!" she murmured again, contentedly.

"Well, you ought to tell your mother—"

"Old Maid!" she teased. Suddenly she flung her arms tight around his neck, almost choked him, kissing him wildly, again and again. "Roger, I do love you—I do! I do!"

He crushed her arm to him, bruising her soft flesh, smothering her with passionate kisses. His arms were bands of steel, the rough khaki of his coat scratched her face but she made no sound. She lay limp in his arms, drunk with happiness.

Minutes passed. Or was it hours? Nancy's eyes were closed. Her thick lashes lay dark on her flushed cheek. Roger roused himself, kissed her closed eyelids. "But just the same, you ought to write to your mother, old lady!"

"All right," she said, after a long pause.

He went back to his papers. From where she sat, at the ink-stained hotel desk she could see him out of the corner of her eye. A big, blond man in the olive drab of a ranger. Reading the newspaper in a cheap hotel in Reno. Absorbed in it already.

"That's my husband. I'm married to him," she whispered to herself. A big tear dropped, blotting the ink, spoiling her letter.

Estranged, Though Both Loved -:- By Henrietta Weisbrod

THE ways of a woman are strange to a man and few men really understand what's in a woman's heart. For that reason, being a man, Robert Latham thought his wife happy. He gave her a decent allowance for running the house. He gave her money for her own personal expenses and he never objected if she drew on him to pay her bridge debts.

She had the use of his car, her car as well as his, and in the summer the two went on a vacation. The fact that the vacation was usually used up in attending conferences or meetings of some club in Seattle or Washington never seemed to alter the case of its being a vacation, according to Latham.

Margaret Latham was one of the brightest and happiest women, seemingly, in her set. She had a wit that was lively and an intelligence that made her adaptable to the most extreme situation. She was often seen at the theater and dance parties, and she was the liveliest person there.

To Robert life was complete as far as marriage and Margaret was concerned. Margaret enjoyed life. She laughed and it seemed to Robert that there was nothing for him to do but go on and work, for he liked to work. Margaret never interfered with his business as long as he furnished the checks every week.

To him the reason for Margaret's laughter was plain. She had every thing she wanted from him and married life. There was nothing else to wish for. No wonder Margaret laughed. But that was the man of it.

"Bob," she said one evening, "it is such a pretty spring night, let's you and I go for a little drive in the country."

"Got to work," Bob grunted.

"But you can't miss this. Why, I heard a robin this morning. And I bet the country is beautiful this time of year. Maybe it will be dark—too dark to see the apple blossoms, but, dear, we can smell them anyhow."

But Robert wanted to stay home and look over a plan that he had for office management. He begged off and Margaret changed her mind and went out to a movie. Margaret had this happen a hundred times, this refusal from Robert. She took his refusals now rather casually. Robert was good to her and why should she object to his not wanting to go out nights.

To a woman life means more than just a comfortable living. Love counts for a lot. She knew that Robert must care for her or else he wouldn't be so generous with money. And then she wondered.

Coming home from the movie she drove through the park. Young couples here and there on the benches were silent before the omnipotence of their love exaggerated by spring. Margaret stopped her car, got out and found a seat for herself. She seemed to hear spring coming as she sat there. The birds that had sung all day seemed to be singing in the night. There was beauty here beyond all expression. She couldn't enjoy it alone and so the first name that came to her was Robert. She loved him. Did he love her?

That night she decided, for some strange reason, that he didn't love her. She realized that her life was empty, in spite of its fullness of this world's goods, empty of love. Robert was always too busy for love.

A young man passed and misinterpreting the reason for Margaret's being there he took a seat nearby and watched her. It must have been the night, and springtime, for Margaret felt daring. She turned and smiled at the young man and in two minutes he had come over and was talking to her. He seemed to know that there was such a thing as life and love. He talked about many things and Margaret who had been denied just common congenial talk with a man found him interesting. He suggested a walk and when she mentioned that she had a car nearby he suggested that she drive.

Once in the car Margaret felt ashamed of herself. It was her first violation of the trust Robert must have in her. But the presence of the man cheered her and for once she forgot Robert.

"Life is strange," the young man philosophized, " I don't know you and you don't know me and yet we are as like in our interests as people who knew each other better. Tomorrow we'll go on our way, forgetting this moment. Why not make the most of it?"

"I—What do you mean?" Margaret asked.

"Oh, what's the difference? You'll never see me again and I'll never see you."

"But we might," Margaret said.

Some way on their drive the young man got his arms around the woman, and further on he kissed her. But Margaret was not the person to fall so easily and when she suggested she drive the young man home he accepted her invitation. He was safe, Margaret thought. She had nothing to worry about.

The young man's fairness made Margaret feel cheap. She had encouraged him. But she never worried about her drive with an unknown man. She worried about the new position in life the experience gave her. If she had been dishonest with this young man had she not also been dishonest with Rob? She knew that he didn't care for her . He never seemed to show any interest. Then why did she accept his help?

That settled matters for the woman. The next morning after her husband had gone to work she made preparations to leave. She packed her belongings and hastily wrote a note to her husband telling him that she had no reason for leaving him, because he gave her everything she wanted. But it seemed that she wanted something else.

Robert Latham sat back in his swivel chair that day and smiled to himself. He had made money and he was happy in spending it on his wife. She, too, was happy, for she always laughed.

That evening he found his wife's note. Why had she gone? Where had she gone? What a fool thing to do. And that because a man never understands a woman. The evening was a bore. He discovered that he could not entertain himself. Even his business affairs bored him. He turned on the radio, he put a record on the phonograph, and he tried to read.

At last he discovered that it was his wife that he wanted. He never knew that Margaret was whiling away the evening in some hotel, weeping at what she had done, loving her husband, and fearing that he might not love her, had never loved her, and would never . . . now. But Robert found her the next day. He did not go to his office. For once the routine of business could wait. He wanted to find his wife. He found her in a small hotel and when Margaret saw his happiness at seeing her she knew that everything was all right.

"I understand everything," he said to her.

They were driving home in the car.

"But why did you always laugh and seem so happy?" Robert asked. "What was the reason for your laughter?"

"I was laughing to fill up the emptiness of what seemed to me a life without love."

"Yes," Robert said. "That's something you can't buy."

"I'd be happy if you were so poor that you couldn't give me a thing if I were as sure—now—as I am of your love."

THE END.

Correct Manners

Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer American readers' questions on etiquette. Write to here, care of this newspaper.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Is it customary for the young man to thank the young lady for the pleasant evening, or is it the young lady's place to thank him? I have always thought that the young man should do the thanking, as he asked the young lady for the evening. A friend and I had quite a dispute on this subject and will you tell us which is correct, please. S. K. Y.

BOTH do a share of thanking. The young man, if he is a well-bred young man, thanks the young lady for going to the party with him. And the young lady, if she is a well-bred young lady, thanks the gentleman for the happy time that she has had and for his hospitality.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please tell me the correct place for the electrical appliances, such as urn set, toaster and grill, in between meals?

READER.

IN a pantry, a butler's pantry, if you have one, or in any other pantry that is convenient.

2—The tablecloth should be removed after a meal, and on the table should be some kind of short runner or linen or lace centerpiece. On this is usually a centerpiece of silver or glass or interesting pottery of some kind, and in this flowers or fruit. If these are too costly for the budget, I suggest a few sprays of Chinese lilies, which now have been so wonderfully developed that they have five or six beautiful leaves. The stalks are put in water, and with care they last two or three years!

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When a man and woman spend a week-end at the home of a couple who have no automobile, who should pay the car-fare when they go some place—the host or the guest? Or should each man pay for his own wife? R. R.

THE host should pay the car-fares for all trips taken while the guests are visiting at his home. Then, when the guests are, in turn, hosts in their home, they would pay the car fares. In no case should each man pay for his own wife—that would be most awkward.

LUCKY TIGER

FADA SYMPHONY TONIGHT AT 10

By FRED TOYE
Radio Editor

ANOTHER leading manufacturer of radio apparatus takes the air to provide a widespread audience with a weekly program of high grade music. The Fada Symphonic Hour is inaugurated at 10 o'clock tonight over stations of the Columbia System. David Mendoza, for nine years director of the Capitol Theater in New York, will lead the studio orchestra, which will supply the bulk of the program each week. Lois Bennett, known as "The Quaker Girl," will be tonight's soloist. Here's the first program: "Musical Comedies of Yesterday;" "Pan Americana;" soprano solo, Lois Bennett, "Bird Song, Pagliacci;" "Punchinello;" "Tales of Vienna Woods;" soprano solo, Lois Bennett, to be selected; "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Tonight's Soconyland Sketch recalls the incidents attendant upon the tragic Burr-Hamilton duel which resulted in the death of one, and the complete eclipse of the other of two of the most popular figures in American national life in the early part of the nineteenth century, and caused such a wave of public feeling as to eliminate forever that sorry form of gallantry.

MORNING listeners were treated yesterday to a learned dissertation by one of our lovely local lady announcers upon the perils of breakfast foods. Now there are breakfast foods and breakfast foods. Some folks like hens' eggs; some like kippers; and it is said that not a few connoisseurs are completely happy with a liquid morning repast ranging from prewar Scotch to New Jersey apple jack. The particular bugaboo pointed out was "certain breakfast foods which have been advertised in the newspapers."

The lady announcer blasted all breakfast fodder with an elegant vocal gesture, stating that they claimed virtues which, if relied upon, would deprive the consumer of much-needed vitamins to be found in other foods. This is dangerous ground for those who are giving voice to radio's perpetual shopping urge. It is pretty general knowledge that newspapers nowadays exercise considerable control over the type of copy which may be used by advertisers. Extravagant and fraudulent statements are not permitted to go into print. The large advertisers have become large advertisers chiefly upon the strength of sound and honest merchandising. In the present stage of radio, it cannot be said that the same condition holds in every case.

THE NATIONAL chains are extremely careful regarding the type of commercial announcements permitted on the air. Their ethics are of the highest. Many local stations, however, are not so meticulous. Newspaper advertisements are printed in plain type and over the signatures of the advertisers. There is a great deal of radio advertising being done today which is issued in the voice and under the personality of one or another of the officials or staff members of the local station. In many cases, articles and products are extolled in fantastic and hysterical manner, with much use of superlatives, direct command, and sublime disregard for fact. Up to date, the radio stations have been permitted to exercise their own discretion in the type of dialogue to be used in commercial broadcast. They are encroaching, however, upon a field in which there is every temptation to run riot. Unless they place a curb upon their clients and upon themselves, they may awake some fine day to find that their tether has been considerably shortened. After all, commercial broadcast stations are licensed to broadcast items of "entertainment, education and public information." It takes an elastic imagination to fit some of our present-day broadcast programs into one of these three categories.

To Install Talkies on Liner Majestic

Among passengers on board the White Star liner Majestic, which arrived at New York today from Southampton and Cherbourg, were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mauran, Jr., Mrs. Norman McLeod, and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney W. Winslow III of Boston.

When the Majestic leaves New York on July 10 on her next eastbound passage, she will have equipment for the presentation of talking pictures, being the first entertainment of the kind ever installed on an ocean liner.

Marchioness Will Leave Tomorrow

The Marchionness Townshend and her son, the Marquis George, who have spent the past 10 days in Lynn in connection with the tercentenary celebration in that city, will leave tomorrow morning on the start of their journey back to England. They are booked on the Bergengaria, sailing from New York July 15.

From Lynn the party will go to Boston to board the 1 o'clock train for New York. They will get off at New Haven and spend the night with Mr. and Mrs. Henry Townshend of that city, relatives of the Marchioness' late husband.

Vote to Reinstate Plymouth Chief

Plymouth, July 9—The board of selectmen voted tonight to reinstate Chief John Armstrong of the Plymouth police who was suspended several weeks ago after an altercation with a patrolman.

Here and There

GLOBE—"Alibi," with Chester Morris and Eleanor Griffith, and "Hey Rube"; starting Thursday, "Thru Different Eyes," a movietone all-talker, and "She Steps Out."

BOWDOIN—"The Trial of Mary Dugan" "Honeymoon" and a Charlie Chase comedy, "Movie Night."

NORUMBEGA PARK — May Collier, billed as champion woman diver, in the free open-air circus. In the theater, "While the City Sleeps"; starting Thursday, "The Office Scandal." Midway attractions.

IS THERE REALLY A HAPSBURG CURSE? Science says "no," but the record of the family makes others wonder. Read the story of Helen Resch, the popular Viennese dancer, in the American Weekly issue of July 14, published as part of the Boston Sunday Advertiser next Sunday.

HAINES FILM AT STATE

A William Haines Film and a splendid stage show lure to Loew's State this week. The feature picture is "A Man's Man," based upon Patrick Kearney's play which loses much in this process of being metamorphosed into a movie. For one thing, the film version takes Mr. Haines out of the rut of his wonted smart aleckism, and forces him to try to do more acting than he is accustomed to do. This new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture is a romance of Hollywood, filmed there and showing intimately the private life of stars and players at the cinema capital. It's the first picture of the kind without a staged "backstage" studio scene. Instead it shows the famous Hollywood party, true to life, the premiere of "White Shadows" at Grauman's famous Chinese theater, the big show affair of Filmdom, with famous letter nights of the screen season.

William Haines

Haines plays a soda water clerk in a Hollywood soda fountain, a boy with a correspondence school complex and an ambition to join the Elks, while Josephine Dunn plays a girl who wants to be a movie star. When they marry things happen. The boy "falls" for book agents and correspondence course salesmen; the girl for the blandishment of an assistant director who says she looks like Greta

KILLS SELF IN TESTING GUN

Ludlow, July 9—Frank Diozio, 33, of State st., died in Ludlow Hospital. He shot himself in the head. Carl A. Schillander, associate medical examiner, viewed the body and pronounced death due to accidental shooting. Diozio informed his wife he was going to try his pistol which had jammed. Fearing an accident she tried to prevent him. In attempting to prove to her the pistol would not work, he placed it against his head and pulled the trigger. The first attempt failed, the second discharged the weapon. Mr. and Mrs. Diozio came to Ludlow a week ago. Diozio had been employed recently by Fred T. Ley Company.

Child Runs Into Cab, Slightly Hurt

Florence Martell, four, of Bainbridge st., Roxbury, ran into a taxicab operated by Morris Trackman of Genesee st., South End, on Washington st., Roxbury, contrary to published reports that she was leaving a trolley, it was learned today.

The child ran from behind a parked automobile and into the mudguard of the cab operated by Trackman, who took her to the New England hospital. At the hospital it was reported she had a slight contusion on the right side of the chest but did not require medical treatment. She went home with her mother.

Boy on Bicycle Struck by Auto

Southampton, July 9—Edward Rivers, 24, of 224 Worcester st., was injured when he was knocked from his bicycle when it was in collision with an auto operated by Lawrence H. Friend of 6 Ashmont st., Dorchester, on the main road to Worcester. Rivers suffered fractured ribs and possible internal injuries

100 Communists Arrested

Sofia, Bulgaria, July 9 (AP)—The police arrested about one hundred communist workmen, who in defiance of the authorities held a mass meeting at the foot of Mount Luline near the capital.

Beauty Parade at Rainbow Gardens

Miss France, one of the members of the international beauty four that are having a beauty parade at Rainbow Gardens tomorrow evening, is portrayed by Miss Ginette Goudart. Miss Goudart was born in Lyons, France, and won many school girl beauty contests before stepping into the professional contest. She was a feature player at Club Lido in Paris and won a contest at that famous resort last November.

Ginette Goudart

Frank Dio Dato, musical director from the Savoy Hotel Orchestra in London, has arranged the musical program.

The master of ceremonies will be Boston's own humorist, George McKinnon.

BOY CHOKES AS ARM IS SET

While on an operating table at City Hospital, having a fractured arm reset, William Rumkel, six, of 284 East Ninth st., suffered a spell of nausea and was asphyxiated.

The boy was taken to the hospital after he had sustained a compound fracture of the right arm in a fall from a fence in the rear of his home.

When seized with the nausea the windpipe of the boy became clogged and he died, although hospital physicians gave him immediate assistance.

FIGHT FIRE IN CITY HALL

A small blaze, discovered in the sub-basement of the City Hall, was extinguished by Robert F. Brennan, superintendent of the fire department garages, and others, before damage could be done.

Discovery of the fire was made by Patrolman Thomas Brown, on duty in the hall at the time.

Argentines Observe Nation's Birthday

Buenos Aires, July 9 (AP)—Argentines today are celebrating the anniversary of the birth of the Argentine nation. The date, July 9, 1816, marks the beginning of the first recognized Republic in Spanish America. Six years before, the colonists of Buenos Aires had declared their freedom from Spain, but it was not until 1816 that the patriots of Argentina, met at Tucuman to establish a national congress and elect the first President of the new states' federation, Francisco De La Prida.

Christian Endeavor Ends Convention

Kansas City, July 9 (AP)—A formal service in which approximately 300 young men and women consecrated their lives to the ministry and allied Christian work ended the 32nd annual international convention of Christian Endeavor here. The 1930 convention will be held in San Francisco.

Plymouth Selectmen Reinstate Chief

Plymouth, July 9—The Board of Selectmen have voted to reinstate Chief John Armstrong of the Plymouth police force who was suspended several weeks ago on charges made by another officer.

The board decided that the charges were without foundation.

BUSTER KEATON AT ORPHEUM

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

When entering Loew's Orpheum this week, be sure your risibles are in good working order. You will have plenty of opportunity to make liberal use of them. Buster Keaton will force the laughs, willy-nilly; and then, when you are thinking about all the fun must be run out of the keg of merriment, along will come Milton Berle, master of ceremonies of the stage show and a tip top comedian, to wrench several bakers' dozens more out of you. It is one of the best summer bills we have seen; the playhouse is delightfully and refreshingly cool, and by all the rules of the game you should be amused to the full contentment of your heart, and your funny-bone. The show is generous both as to quantity and quality—both O. K. and a K. O.!

Buster Keaton

The ebullient Buster does his stuff in the film comedy, "Spite Marriage." Most of it is shot as a backstage story, but from novel angles. Buster butts into the love life of a certain stage star, the role of Dorothy Sebastian. He is a tailor who borrows his patrons' suits to put on the front for his wooing. Keatonesquily, he gets tangled up in about everything, tangles up about everybody else, wrecks a stage set, and is generally and riotously mirth-provoking.

Buster Keaton, as is easy to imagine, is a scream. Miss Sebastian is a passable actress, and Leila Hyams is fair enough as the vamp. There is some excellent camera work both ashore and afloat, and the picture is summerishly satisfying.

The vaudeville bubbles over into the classy kind. Berle is a surprise; he knows his onions, puts his lines over easily and smoothly handles the long program.

There are numerous good features; Helen Johns and her Glorious Girls offer an exceptionally fine musical act. The girls are versatile players, and very clever. Other good ones are Marshall Montgomery, ventriloquist; Lucas and Lillian, superb; and Fynan and Doris.

Count Bonick Heads Keith-Albee Bill

Count Bonick, vaudeville's favorite master of melody, who is leading his band of Aristocrats at the Keith-Albee this week, is a native of Belgium. He was born and spent his early childhood in Ypres. His father was a master at the piano, and so it was quite natural that at an early age the youth began to show a keen appreciation of music. Many joyous hours the two spent together—father at the piano, the son accompanying him on the violin. This association between father and son was interrupted suddenly by the war when the Bonick family were forced to join the other refugees and flee for their lives. Throughout the war, the little family was taken care of by relatives in Paris. Shortly after the war, Count Bonick's father died and the boy sailed for America to continue his musical studies.

$200 Cash Award in Puzzle Test

HERE'S puzzle No. 2 (third series) in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser's unique Distinguished American Crossword Puzzle Test. Solve this and hold it until you have the seven puzzles of the third week's series. Read the rules carefully.

The judges in the novel Distinguished American Crossword Puzzle tests started their task this morning in judging the solutions of the first series of seven puzzles.

Each set of solutions will be checked carefully with the correct answers to the definitions. Then each set will be classed according to the number of mistakes it contains. The solutions will play the greatest part in the final decision as to the winners of the cash awards. Although the sentence, which is to embody words appearing in the solution of Puzzle No. 7 of each series, too, will play an important part in selecting the best solutions.

Each week the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser will offer cash awards totaling $200 for the best solutions according to the rules of the tests.

Today, puzzle No. 2 of the third week is published. There will be seven puzzles in this week's series. If you missed puzzle No. 1 of this week you can obtain it by sending three cents to Crossword Test Editor, P. O. Box 185, Boston, or by calling at the Boston American office, 5 Winthrop sq. The supply of papers containing Puzzle No. 1 (third week), is limited. Crossword fans cannot be assured of obtaining back copies of the Boston Evening American. If you can solve crossword puzzles and would like to try your skill in an attempt to get part of the $200 cash awards, you should get the Boston Evening American each day on the day of publication.

A crossword puzzle fan living in Exeter, N. H., failed to put sufficient postage on the solutions for the first week series. This fan will receive the solutions back from the post office. Be sure you have the proper postage on your solutions when you mail them.

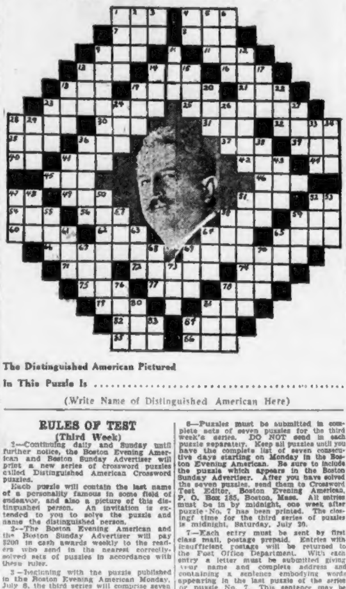
DISTINGUISHED AMERICAN CROSSWORD PUZZLES



The Distinguished American Pictured

In This Puzzle Is ....

(Write Name of Distinguished American Here)

RULES OF TEST
(Third Week)

1—Continuing daily and Sunday until further notice, the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser will print a new series of crossword puzzles called Distinguished American Crossword puzzles.

Each puzzle will contain the last name of a personality famous in some field of endeavor, and also a picture of this distinguished person. An invitation is extended to you to solve the puzzle and name the distinguished person.

2—The Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser will pay $200 in cash awards weekly to the readers who send in the nearest correctly-solved sets of puzzles in accordance with these rules.

3—Beginning with the puzzle published in the Boston Evening American Monday, July 8, the third series will comprise seven crossword puzzles, one published each day for seven days. After the seventh crossword puzzle is published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, July 14, you are to send in the complete set of seven puzzles.

4—This procedure will continue each week, and $200 in cash awards will be distributed each week for the best and most correctly solved set of crossword puzzles according to these rules.

The weekly cash awards as follows:

First award (each week)	$100
Second award	50
Third award	25
Next five awards ($5 each)	25
Grand total of awards each week	$200

5—This offer is open to every one, men, women, boys and girls with the exception of employes of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser and their families. It costs you nothing—just a test of your skill and knowledge.

6—Puzzles must be submitted in complete sets of seven puzzles for the third week's series. DO NOT send in each puzzle separately. Keep all puzzles until you have the complete list of seven consecutive days starting on Monday in the Boston Evening American. Be sure to include the puzzle which appears in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. After you have solved the seven puzzles, send them to Crossword Test Editor, Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 185, Boston, Mass. All entries must be in by midnight, one week after puzzle No. 7 has been printed. The closing time for the third series of puzzles is midnight, Saturday, July 20.

7—Each entry must be sent by first class mail, postage prepaid. Entries with insufficient postage will be returned to the Post Office Department. With each entry a letter must be submitted giving your name and complete address and containing a sentence embodying words appearing in the last puzzle of the series or puzzle No. 7. This sentence may be long or short. You may use as few or as many of the words contained in puzzle No. 7 as you like, but the sentence must be complete and it must make sense. Readers may submit as many sets of answers as they wish, but no contestant will be entitled to more than one award.

8—It is not necessary to buy the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser. You may copy or trace the puzzles and send them in.

9—The judges will be appointed by the Boston Evening American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser and their decision will be based on the correctness and neatness of the solutions and the ingenuity and completeness of the sentences embodying words in puzzle No. 7. The decision of the judges will be final. In case of ties a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

10—The names of the winners of the cash awards will be published in the Boston Evening American.

Rene Adoree Given Ovation From Fans

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service

SEATTLE, July 9—If you have any lingering doubt that Renee Adoree isn't popular, you should have been in San Francisco when she was introduced from the stage of the Fox Theater. Renee, in an orchid and yellow combination, received an ovation that was second to none. In fact, my listening ears discerned just a shade more applause for her than for any other star, with the exception of Norma Shearer and a few other notable headliners.

Well, Renee has been chosen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the feminine lead in "The Ordeal," with Charles Brabin directing and Nils Asther as leading man. Nils, too, is popular, and so popular that his accent isn't affecting him in the movies. Renee and Nils were seen much in each other's company at San Francisco, but since there were several other devoted young men who followed La Belle Renee about, we need not take Mr. Asther's apparent devotion too seriously.

GEORGE JESSEL, who incessantly makes speeches about the Fox Company, is to be rewarded for his vigilance in praising Mr. Fox and his activities in motion pictures by being given the lead in "The Hurdy Gurdy Man." While I do not like to say that Mr. Jessel is diplomatic, he does work overtime talking about Mr. Fox and the part he plays in raising the standards of the movie industry. Most of us feel the same way about our bosses, but we are not so eloquent as Mr. Jessel. William K. Howard is to direct the garrulous George. The story is by Leroy Clemens and John Hymer, and the musical score is by Wolfe Gilbert and Abel Dore.

HARK to this piece of news related to me via the old reliable telegraph. Greenwich Village Follies, so long an institution on Broadway, is to close up its tent and let the movies follow its traditions. From Hollywood, at any rate, comes a telegram to the glorious city of Seattle, saying that there will be no stage edition of Greenwich Follies next year. Of course, Pathe may be a little overzealous and a little unduly enthusiastic when it says there will be no 10th edition of the Greenwich Village Follies in New York, but instead the author and director will give their art directly to the screen. And in case you are interested, the 10th edition of Greenwich Village Follies will be done in color for Pathe.

WARNER BROTHERS have cornered almost all the sisters in Hollywood. "The Show of Shows" is doing this trick, and arrangements already have been made to present Marceline and Alice Day, Viola Dana and Shirley Mason, Loretta Young and Sally Blane (latter borrowed from R. K. O.), Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day, Dolores and Helene Costello, and we are told the end is not in sight. More power to the sisters!

COLUMBIA, and I don't mean the river, but the film company, located me here in Seattle to advise that negotiations are now on hot and heavy for Elliot Nugent to play the part of the hoofer in "The Broadway Hoofer." That is the role, you will remember, for which Bobby Watson was brought on from New York to play. Bobby was paid off, and allowed to see Hollywood without a movie contract. We wonder just what the trouble really was. Perhaps some one will tell us. We are a long way from home.

DEAR me! dear me! dear me! Never a day but we get a little note from one of the readers complaining about something. John Willard writes that he owns the title to "Sisters," having copyrighted it in 1923. Harry Cohn recently made an announcement that he was about to produce a movie called "Sisters," with Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day.

Sid Grauman playing a new golf link.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

TAX CUT PLAN PRAISED BY RUTH MIX

The young woman who graces the bill at B. F. Keith's theater in Boston this week with stirring displays of horsemanship and sports of the range, believes the income tax for the average person has just about the same effect as a nettle under her horse Lindy's saddle blanket. Not that she ever permits a nettle to find a place on that sleek coat. But if she had her way, she wouldn't let the epidermis of the American people be irritated by any darned old income tax, either.

Tom Mix, star of screen thrillers and circus wild west shows, was one of the first of the professional world to commend the American for its stand on the income tax problem. His statement given in Boston several months ago, was printed in newspapers all over the United States.

Today, Ruth Mix outlined her ideas upon the subject.

"There is a widespread feeling that the federal tax on earned incomes is unfair. There is a feeling that there are plenty of sources of revenue for the Government apart from this system of peering into the pay envelopes of the nation. So long as this sentiment prevails, there will be unrest. The fact that the income tax comes up only once a year does not alter the issue. We all know that it takes its toll every week of every month.

"The income tax places a handicap upon ambition, talent and thrift. Worse, it favors material forms of wealth in prejudice to human energies.

"I sincerely trust that the Boston Evening American and the Hearst newspapers throughout the country will be successful in this splendid campaign in the people's cause."

Great Heroism Displayed in Crash Off Cape Ann

The best traditions of the sea were maintained off Cape Ann, when in the dense fog and ill light of dawn, more than two hundred passengers were transferred without loss of life from the sinking steamship Prince George to the Coast Guard Cutter Agassiz.

What might easily have been another Vestris disaster became, through heroism, an epic story of rescue at sea, with tragedy stalking the fog-shrouded water, but never quite able to board the ships involved.

Of course there must be the usual investigation to fix blame for the collision. But the individual fault shapes up as insignificant beside the adherence to duty, the collective presence of mind and the splendid courage that the fault inspired.

The United States Coast Guard Service, the Eastern Steamship Lines, Inc., and the officers and crews of both ships are wholly deserving of the nation's admiration.

A Senator Should Know

This One Is at Least Frank

(Copyright, 1929)

Senator Arthur R. Gould, Jr., says he is against prohibition. The people in his State make wine from elderberry flowers and grapes, says he, adding "God Almighty put those flowers and vines on the earth, and He intended them to be used."

The Senator buys grape juice to make wine.

All of which would not be important, as there are millions like him, except that Senator Gould represents in Washington the State of Maine, "dry" for seventy-five years.

Senator Gould of prohibition Maine, says:

"As you know, I come from a prohibition State and I am supposed to be a prohibitionist, but I am about as loyal to the prohibition element as some of these Southern Democrats are to the Democratic party. I note they are obliged to be Democrats to hold their jobs in Washington, but some of them often vote with the Republicans. While I find it is not policy to be too outspoken as to my sentiments, I don't mind telling you and the world that I believe a license for light wines and beer would be a great improvement over the present prohibition law that seems impossible to enforce.

"I have talked this to a good many Senators and Congressmen since I have been here, and I find a good many of the members feel just about as I do, but lack the moral courage to stand up and vote as they believe. I may be able to be of service to you people before my term expires here."

And that was written to a man whose business it is to sell grape juice to be made into ALCOHOLIC WINE.

Needed, Indeed

Voltaire Said It, Long Ago

(Copyright, 1929)

Dr. Scherer, Pastor of the Church of the Holy Trinity, addressing the Young Women's Conference at East Northfield, Mass., denounces the idea of a "Godless world, and the suggestion that man was finding in a big social relationship the peace he used to find in God."

Voltaire put it more briefly: "If there had been no God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

In these days, when a reflector telescope reveals other universes, twenty-five million "light years" away, adding that a "light year" means trillion of miles, we realize that a God, and a very great one is needed to manage so vast a universe.

It is only necessary to enlarge the idea of a universal ruler, one that must be different from a rule capable of managing only a universe baby such as our ancestors imagined, with this earth, the center, the sun, moon and stars fixed in the sky a few miles away to light our important doings.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SHORTLY after you come to live in the mountain or desert places of the west, you hear people talking about the Ditch. They mention casually, so casually that you imagine it is one of the trivial details of their lives

At first you do not understand why they should mention it at all. To you, city bred, a ditch is just a trench in the ground. Common water. Why mention it? Presently you realize that, in spite of their casual manner, the Ditch is of supreme importance to these wilderness dwellers. It is, indeed, the very heart of their lives. They build all their plans about it—

Then suddenly some day when you are very tired and dusty you stumble upon the Ditch for yourself. And, as you plunge your hot face into its cool depths, you suddenly realize how beautiful and powerful and mysterious "common" water is.

From bank to bank it brims—a living artery. Far back, in the shadow of the pines and the manzanita you see its sparkling approach—far ahead, across the open clearings, stretches its bright trail. For miles, up and down the Sierras, into the lowlands, it runs, giving life to man and beasts, watering the grain and the garden.

All life in the wilderness taps the Ditch. All progress depends upon it. Presently you, too, begin to depend upon it. If you can get water from the Ditch you can clear four or five extra acres—build a wash room—have running water in the kitchen—Life is no longer at the mercy of dry spells. The Ditch has become your friend and partner. When you see the glint of it between the tree trunks and the grass your friend.

And you think of other friendliness. You think of all that common, human friendliness which so seldom makes the first page, but which runs through our days like this life-giving Ditch.

The loyalty and generosity of comrades, the patient love of obscure fathers and mothers, the kindness of those who work beside us at counter or bench—

Common service, how casually we accept it all, never questioning our right to it. And yet what strange and lovely miracle is it.

How amazing that this sweet, life-giving current should proceed from our rolled depths—

How lovely that it should brighten the dark and dangerous places of our wilderness—

How blessed that we may turn to it when our [illegible] our eyes are [illegible]

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

IT is foolish to say that the modern man has no domestic yearnings in his heart—that he is a rover with a restless foot, and automobile complex and no desire for the sweet home life.

Every unattached man, no matter how "bachelorized" he may seem, has his secret dreams and visions of the "Some Day" when he shall settle down with the Ideal Woman in the Perfect Home. The little domestic monarchy, in which HE shall rule, of course.

Where the grapefruit always remains cold and the soup always remains hot, and the roast never reaches the medium-done state, until he chooses to GET there.

Where somebody is always looking for his things, or his hat or his approval—and NOBODY is ever lying awake listening for his latchkey.

Where the housecleaning is done by magic, and an unseen fairy godmother transforms his linen from soiled wads upon the floor into a chiffonier full of snowy shirts and collars and neatly darned socks.

Where his morning moodiness is accepted as a matter of course, and his evening absence is regarded as a matter of "business."

Where his desk, his razor, his newspapers and his privacy are considered sacred; and where he may clean his fishing tackle or his gun in the living-room, track muddy boots or dripping golf-bags over the rugs and throw his wet raincoat over the damask couch, without fear of reproof.

Where the unexpected guest is always EXPECTED and is as welcome as the postman, or the morning newspaper.

Where the "gang" may drop in at ANY time from midday to midnight, and turn on the radio, make big whoopee and leave wet tumblers all over the grand piano.

Where it is a household tenet that cigarette ashes are good for the rugs and that smoke will keep moths out of curtains.

Where his favorite arm-chair and all the newspapers are one-man monopolies, and not regarded as community comforts.

Where his pockets are never rifled, his spirits are never ruffled, no questions are ever asked, and there are no arguments, no regular hours, and no by-laws! All the freedom of a bachelor flat, all the comforts of home and all the service of a good hotel! That is [illegible] of "Home!" [illegible]!

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

You meet them all over the continent in herds of 60 with the bravest in front.

They come back home with an education consisting of all the misinformation that can be supplied by a lying guide.

One thing we will say about the guide over on the debit side of the Atlantic, he knows all about it even if it never happened.

Those guide books are joke books in another language. If you believe what they tell you then you must have one of those heads that a cannibal would have to serve on toast.

The best way to see Europe is in the news weeklies. Stay at home and import your statistics.

There is one thing that you cannot import. And that is the boat train to Paris. Here is the only train in the world that travels at the speed of 500 bottles an hour.

Nobody has yet figured out why they call it the dining car.

Americans have been dry since 1919. The reaction is healthy.

In about five minutes there is a sound of revely by proxy.

In ten minutes the collegiates have organized football games and have thrown the conductor for a three-car loss.

A lady at the end table is a singing teacher in Ohio when she is in Ohio. A couple of snifters and she starts giving out free lessons.

On old gentleman who never took a drink in his life while anybody was looking, is playing a bass solo on a bottle of champagne. There is something about the boat train from Cherbourg that makes you determined to operate on your own adenoids with a corkscrew.

Inside of an hour the boat train is a shambles of information. Everybody wants to tell the story of his or her life. There is nothing like good old railroad syrup to make tongues clang like the chimes of Normandy.

The best tabloid serial we heard was a divorcee traveling through Europe on high-powered alimony. Her jag was pure bourbon inlaid with mother-of-pearl.

She was crying on a gendarme's shoulder when the train pulled into Paris and she was saying:

"My husband wouldn't buy me Central Park. So I slapped him over the head with a furnished apartment."

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Power gradually extirpates from the mind every humane and gentle virtue. —Burke

The worst sorrows in life are not in its losses and misfortunes, but its fears. —Benson

Language is the amber on which a thousand precious and subtle thoughts have been safely embedded and preserved. —Trench

Youth is the time to study wisdom; old age is the time to practise it. —Rousseau

All truth is an achievement. If you would have truth at its full value, go win it. —Munger.

Medbury Says—

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

A MAN may be sitting on top of the world, but the chances are he'll have to get up and give his seat to a lady.

Efficiency Experts

The somnambulist who always takes a mirror to bed with him so that he can see where he's going.

Auto-Suggestion

You're Right

At most Scotch colleges they give two cheers.

American Tragedies

Financial Note

Ode to a Gold-Digger

Poor men are born, and the rich ones are "made."

Ideal Dumbells

Among the Illiterati

Several kleptomaniacs have formed a "Crook of the Month Club."

Our Own Vaudeville

Gertie: Oh, he's a big three letter man from an alphabetical soup factory.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

HE who has songs in his heart will go
Singing always,
Changes that come like the winds that blow
Change not his days.

Bright are his hours and his paths are sweet;
Ever he hears
Wings of loved harmonies over him beat,
Sons from far spheres.

Something within him keeps echoing song
While the years creep;
Forces that lift him and bear him along,
Secret and deep.

But for his lips
Wine that seems turning to sunlight again
Gayly he sips.

Little to him are the ebb and flow
Marking life's tides;
He who has songs in his heart must go
Where song abides.

'Buy British'—Say Britons

Why Not "Buy UNITED STATES" in Our Country?

(Copyright, 1929)

"BUY BRITISH AND BE PROUD OF IT"

This picture, part of an advertisement published by a British concern, "Morris Motors, Ltd.," is recommended to the earnest consideration of American merchants, shoppers, employers, dividend spenders, coupon cutters and all Americans GENERALLY.

The Morris concern, BRITISH, and proud of it, prints this picture showing a great number of the Morris cars. It prints its name in large letters, "MORRIS," and underneath the line that you read above, "Buy British and Be PROUD Of It"—nothing more.

It is an invitation to the people of Great Britain to SPEND their money where they EARN it.

America makes better cars than Britain can make, and the British know it. American cars of better quality are CHEAPER IN PRICE than the British cars, even after paying the heavy British duty.

Nevertheless, tens of thousands of Britishers "BUY BRITISH AND ARE PROUD OF IT."

It would be a good thing if this "Buy British" idea could be transplanted into the brains of American buyers, merchants and others, translated into "BUY UNITED STATES AND BE PROUD OF IT."

Fortunately our automobile industry doesn't need any assistance along the line of "Buy United States." Everybody in America buys American cars, with the exception of a few who, perhaps, lacking any particular distinction in themselves, think they can BUY distinction with a foreign label. They don't amount to much, and do not affect the American market.

In OTHER directions there is often too much of an inclination to "Buy Foreign" instead of "Buying United States."

In some places the three feathers and coat of arms of the Prince of Wales, or the entire British royal outfit, with the lion, unicorn and the whole business, are inserted in an American advertisement, to make the buyer think that he is getting the essence of the whole British royal family with a cravat or a shirt.

That is so humorous as to be almost harmless. But it indicates a [illegible] feeble condition of mind.

American merchants should SELL United States. American buyers should BUY United States and all should be PROUD OF IT.

The British set an excellent example. They don't consider anything better than BRITISH. And they do not attempt to make themselves more respectable by wearing or using something made in another country.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. M'INTYRE

NEW YORK, July 9—New York reacts to the gloom of a rainy day with a spontaneous gaiety. In the Broadway canyon especially it becomes a signal for charivari.

Hotels have discovered rain balloons sales of charged water and orange juice more than 50 per cent.

On drizzling matinee days theaters often turn 'em away. The Metropolitan Art Gallery and the Museum of Natural History are similarly crowded. The gravel path around the park reservoir bobs with umbrellas and many horseback riders enjoy sloshing through a shower.

Rain fills the Fifth Avenue Club windows and the Bridge Club tables are crowded. The green lumbering buses, like so many elephants, sway with a mackintoshed crew of rainy weather addicts and the midtown speakeasies have a sudden rush of trade.

Strangely enough, the outlying haunts—such as the Claremont and Arrowhead Inn—do a rousing afternoon business when the heavens weep. Two other rainy afternoon spots are the Cafe Lafayette and Brevoort, where patrons gather to play chess, checkers and cubito.

The underground city that sprays out from the Grand Central station is alive, too. Here folks may prowl about visiting everything from an oyster bar to an art gallery without once stepping out doors. And after the holiday, board their trains and are whisked to suburbia.

Another damp diversion is the swimming pool. The moment rain starts attendance skyrockets. Along Sixth ave. the penny arcades and the shooting galleries become popular retreats as do also the photomatons and the movie houses.

The real sufferers in a downpour are the large department stores and the exclusive specialty shops. For them it is a dead business loss they can never make up. An odd business boom a rain inspires, however, is the sale of automobiles.

Poor Margaret Lawrence! Another beauty impaled on the thorns beneath Broadway's bed of roses. The theatrical toast—then one of its crumbs. Several times before her shocking murder I saw her along the streets in my neighborhood — harassed, tight-lipped and seemingly beaten. She typified Broadway's tragic trinity—talent, fame and drink.

Around the great metropolitan telephone exchanges at quitting time flurry many types once heralded as Stage Door Johns. They await hopefully the casual pick-up among switchboard beauties as they debouch to the street.

A New York psychiatrist says men who talk out loud to themselves can stop it by merely exercising will power. And spoil half the fun of the morning bath.

The pajama has invaded another social realm. The yachting pajama is now worn by many ladies on week-end boating trips. White flannel trousers, a jersey bodice, a gaudy colored flannel sleeveless jacket—and there you are, By Cracky!

A bootshop in the Fifties is maintained solely by six wealthy New York families. No patronage is accepted outside the circle.

A notice in a photograph studio in the Fifties has stark ferocity. It reads: "We can photograph you accurately, but cannot make you beautiful unless Nature made you so." The proprietor does a large business among those who want to appear as they are.
